SUMMARY.

Field-Marshal Haig, in his report on Tuesday, says that the fighting in the Arras battle was exceptionally fierce.

Seven German divisions were engaged on the Croisilles-Gavrelle front, and several points of tactical importance changed hands more than once.

The British advanced on the whole front, and took more than 1500 prisoners.

The enemy made repeated determined counter-attacks regardless of losses.

"The British have made the second great thrust at our lines," the German report regarding the Arras battle says.

The report continues: "Our destructive fire caused the British in many places to withdraw with heavy losses."

At other points, the German report says, the battle sways backwards and forwards with great bitterness.

The accounts of correspondents at British headquarters all agree that the fighting on Monday was terrific.

Mr. Philip Gibbs says that the fight is so far in our favour, our losses being lighter than the enemy's.

The centres of the struggle were at Gavrelle and Guemappe. Both were retaken by the Germans, but are finally ours.

The French communique reports that advances have been made at several points. There have been violent artillery actions.

It is announced that British aviators had a record day on Monday.

Altogether forty German machines were brought down. Fifteen of them were seen to crash on the ground.

The Admiralty reports that three British naval aeroplanes attacked five German destroyers off the Flemish coast on Monday.

One of the destroyers, which was hit by a bomb, listed to port, and was probably sunk.

A message from Egypt says the Turkish forces have been reinforced, and hold a strong position from Gaza towards Beersheba.

The organisation of the positions gained by the British fronting the Turkish main line is proceeding satisfactorily.

The Turks have been further pressed back in Mesopotamia, with heavy casualties.

Though recruiting is slow in the United States, vigorous opposition to conscription has developed in the debate in Congress.

Senator Thomas, one of the chief speakers, urged following the British example, and giving voluntaryism a trial.

General Bridges, of the British War Office, says conscription is vital before America can have any success in the war.

The war expenditure in Canada to date has been £120,000,000, and the national debt is now £180,000,000.

The debt at the close of the financial year will probably be £260,000,000. Heavy increased taxation is announced.

Remarkable revelations concerning the ex-Czarina of Russia appear in the Moscow newspapers.

In a letter to the monk Rasputin, the ex-Czarina wrote: "I love you, and have faith in you alone."

The ex-Czarina's grief at the murder of Rasputin was reflected in a number of letters.

Lord Calthorpe proposes that aeroplanes drop fireballs on the Rhine Valley and on the Hungarian plains, and so destroy crops.

Mr. Kennedy Jones, Director of the British Food Economy Department, declares that the submarine menace is greater than ever.

Lord Devonport, Food Controller, says the latest estimate of Canada's exportable wheat is much below the reported 81,000,000 bushels.

The debate on the Corn Production Bill has begun in the House of Commons.

Mr. Prothero emphasised the necessity for greater independence against foreign supplies, and of making rural life more attractive.

The German National Liberal papers protest against a peace programme of no annexations and no indemnities.

The Kolnische Zeitung says that peace without victory would be senseless.

The second anniversary of Anzac Day was observed yesterday, the chief functions being a military procession and memorial services.

There was also a recruiting rally in Martin-place, torchlight procession, and patriotic rally at the Town Hall.

The celebrations in the schools included readings, recitations, patriotic songs, and addresses bearing on Anzac Day.

The Governor is to be given a public farewell at the Town Hall to-night.

Mr. Hughes was asked yesterday whether, in the event of a British victory, Germans would be allowed to enter Australia.

"If I am returned to office, Germans will certainly not be admitted," he replied.

Mr. Beeby refers to the discontent among some of the farmers as to the administration of the wheat pool.

What, he asks farmers, would have been their position, remembering the transport difficulties, without such a pool?

Archbishop Cerretti, the Papal Delegate, opened the Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society's Conference yesterday.

After all the Catholics had done in this war, it was sad to find their loyalty questioned, he said.

The District President (Brother Devlin), mentioned that no fewer than 1041 members of the society had enlisted for active service.

The New Zealand coal miners, who have been on strike, will resume work to-day.

A contingent of 173 Australian soldiers, who had been wounded in France, disembarked at Melbourne yesterday.

The New South Wales and Queensland men will arrive overland from Melbourne by special train to-morrow morning.

A Wellington message gives the amounts received by New Zealand producers from the British Government for supplies.

For meat £16,348,628 has been paid, for wool £10,374,690, and for cheese £2,858,250.

The death is announced of Mr. H. C. Dangar, M.L.C., in his 87th year.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ferris, formerly a member of the Legislative Assembly, died at Parramatta yesterday.

Over £30,000 a week is paid in wages to the men engaged in the mining industry at Broken Hill.

A statement has been officially prepared which shows the State loan expenditure each year since federation.

The aggregate public debt of the State in 1901 was £64,471,255, or £47 12s 1d per head. Now it is £132,512,462, or £71 7s 10d per head.

Application has been made to the Courts for an injunction to restrain the Queensland Government from taking a referendum.

The referendum was to have been taken on the question of the abolition of the Legislative Council.

The Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Victoria deplores the recourse to raffling in patriotic efforts.

The Commonwealth Government intends to assist farmers to procure an adequate supply of superphosphates.

There is a movement to have every school in New South Wales represented at the front by a recruit.

Conscientious objectors in New Zealand may be put to work on State farms at 5s a day.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of diploma day at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College was celebrated yesterday.

The smallpox scare at Coonamble has subsided. No fresh cases have been reported.

The Bulli and Excelsior collieries, employing nearly 500 men, were idle yesterday on account of the employees' grievances.

Mrs. Turner, wife of a tin mine owner near Tenterfield, was buried by a fall of earth, and died.

In the tea market, New Zealand houses bought fair quantities of Javas.

New-laid eggs were again scarce, and brought 2/6 a dozen.

A fair amount of business was done in mining scrip on the Stock Exchange yesterday.

Barriers were firmer, but the Edna May group sagged.

Forecast.—Fine generally, except for a shower or two on the extreme north coast, with northerly winds, and becoming warmer inland.

FAIR FINANCE.
More so than in any other, the basis of all financial transactions should be fairness and mutual confidence. In our dealings with the public, we have always striven to attain this end. We think that the success of our business and the numbers of our well-satisfied customers is complete demonstration of the confidence with which this business is regarded. You should be most careful at all times to transact your financial business with people whom you feel you can trust. We guarantee to our customers easy terms, quick accommodation, courtesy, privacy, and consideration. We transact financial business of every kind, and make advances in town or country against furniture, life policies, deeds of vacant land or property, interests under wills, war loan bonds or certificates, shares in companies, second mortgages, or any acceptable security. We also make advances without security to approved applicants. All applications, personally or by letter, receive immediate consideration.

BEGINS TO-DAY—COME QUICKLY!

THE STORE that wishes to reach and maintain a position of leadership with keen shoppers must, above all things, be progressive; its advertising must be a faithful reflex of its policy.

RIGHT THERE is the reason for the ever increasing popularity of the BIG NEW STORE with a discriminating public.

OUR POLICY of holding a series of DEPARTMENTAL WEEKS has received a wonderful measure of appreciation, and the keen values—quoted below—from our COSTUME and MILLINERY DEPARTMENTS will undoubtedly meet with enthusiastic approval.

ECONOMICS

CHANGES A MAN'S ACTIVITIES. AS YOU CHANGE A MAN'S ACTIVITIES, YOU CHANGE HIS WAY OF LIVING, AND, AS YOU CHANGE HIS ENVIRONMENT YOU CHANGE HIS STATE OF MIND. PRECEPT AND INJUNCTION DO NOT PERCEPTIBLY AFFECT MEN; BUT FOOD, WATER, AIR, CLOTHING, SHELTER, PICTURES, BOOKS, MUSIC, WILL AND DO.

We can contribute largely to the evolution referred to in the foregoing paragraph, but it is principally in regard to clothing in its various forms that we offer our services to-day. Whether it be a suit to measure, a ready to wear, an overcoat, or any one or more of the many lines stocked in our Mercery Department—each and all of these goods are of a character and standard sufficiently high to exercise an uplifting and beneficial influence on the wearer. And there is the added charm afforded by the knowledge that you are securing these desirable goods at very moderate cost.

ANZAC DAY

CHURCH SERVICES.

ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL.

Amidst the sea of memories which are fresh and vivid in the mind covering the commemoration celebrations in Sydney yesterday, there are certain events which forever will stand out like beacons in the minds of all who witnessed them. Such an event was the service at noon in the Cathedral of St. Andrew. Seldom has this stately building held so great an assemblage; rarely, indeed, is so simple, so deeply affecting, and so profoundly impressive a ceremony conducted within its walls, or those of any church. Here were the fathers and the mothers, the widows and others whose dear ones were numbered amongst the immortals. Long before the hour appointed the pews were filled with people, and as the time wore on to noon the scenes at the porches were extraordinary. As many people seemed to be assembled without, vainly hoping and striving to gain admittance, as there were within the densely crowded cathedral. Amongst the sombre black which, relieved by a little white, was almost exclusively worn by the civilians, khaki was noticeably mingled, and a black band which showed out against the brown on many an arm told the story of a fallen brother and a resolution to take his place. Such a story one could read with pathetic vividness near one of the crowded porches where, in heavy crape, a mother, unable to be accommodated with a seat, leaned upon the arm of her khaki-clad son, and wept silently as the deep and measured chords of the Dead March in Saul sounded from the great organ at the conclusion of the service. Soon afterwards the voice of the concourse gave forth the National Anthem, with an intensity and fervour which meant that sorrow can never weaken resolve.

There were many notable persons present. The Archbishop preached, and the lesson, from the Epistle to the Hebrews, was read by the Dean of Sydney, who was present at the lectern. The clergy also included Archdeacon Boyce, Archdeacon Davies, Canon Vaughan, Canon Bellingham, Canon Sharpe, and Canon Cranswick. Among the congregation were Lady Helen Munro Ferguson and Lady Dora Blackwood, the Chief Justice, Sir William Cullen, Commodore Henderson, Brigadier-General Lee, District Commandant, Mr. Justice Street, Mr. Justice Pring, Mr. Justice [illegible], Judge Backhouse, Judge Docker, Sir T. P. Anderson Stuart, and Mr. J. I. Brittain, Consul-General for the United States of America.

The pulpit and the lectern were draped with purple and white. From the pulpit, too, there was suspended a cross of pure white flowers, and from the lectern a wreath. Few, if any, besides those intimately concerned, knew the touching pathos that lay behind these beautifully fashioned emblems. Both had been made by Mrs. Lansdaine and the ladies of the Cathedral, and the flowers which composed them had been contributed one by one by relations of men who fell at Gallipoli. There was only one bloom which was not white, and this was a forget-me-not, in the centre of the wreath.

The Cathedral organist, Mr. Massey, played Sullivan's "Lost Chord" at the commencement of the service, and, after the National Anthem, at the conclusion he played Chopin's "Marche Funebre." "O God Our Help in Ages Past" was the processional hymn, and, after prayers had been offered for the King and all in authority, for those engaged in the war, in commemoration of the landing, and for those in anxiety and sorrow, an anthem, "Whoso dwelleth under the defence of the Most High" (Martin), was sung. The lesson followed, and then the hymn, "The saints of God, the conflict past." After the sermon a hymn for absent friends was sung, the congregation kneeling.

The Archbishop preached from the text, "Whose faith follow," Hebrews xiii., 5. These words, he said, he had taken out of their context to express their thoughts that morning. Why, he asked, were they met together? "It is," he proceeded, "because we recall the dead to-day. We recall before God in solemn memory those gallant Australians who have given themselves and the last sacrifice for their country and their God in these sad days of war. Some lie in Gallipoli, and its trenches, gullies, and cliffs; some in the burning sands of Egypt; some in the inhospitable deserts of Sinai; some in the pleasant fields of France; some amid the sweltering swamps of Mesopotamia. We thank them all this Anzac Day, the anniversary of that day when first in the dawning an Australian army flung its sword into the Empire's scales. We thank God for them; we pray God to comfort those who have lost them from their homes and friendship. We pray that we who survive of this ill-starred generation, and the generations that come after, may be worthy of being saved at such a price."

"Why should we keep Anzac Day as a perpetual memorial?" proceeded the Archbishop. "We should keep it out of sheer gratitude for the dead and for those other gallant men who fought with them, and will come back to us." They must, he said, pass on the memorial to generation after generation. They were almost too near the events to see them in all their glory, their eyes were holden too much by anxiety, and sorrow, and loss. Yet they were beginning to see. One great writer had already given them the epic of Gallipoli—John Masefield's book should be a schoolbook in Australia through all time. "They gave us our lives by their lives," added the preacher. . . . "We must show gratitude in these years when the fight is not yet won; we must complete their task, we must reinforce the broken ranks. To show gratitude we must prepare to make a home again in which to fulfil their destiny fairly when they come back."

But still more must Anzac Day remind Australia of the solemnity of our national life. It had the solemnity of a trust from the dead: how did they come to them, their liberties, their institutions, their share in their world's life? "They come to us after this war," declared the preacher, "bought with the price of tears and blood—blood of the bravest, tears of the brave hearts who lost them." Ought not Anzac Day to be a regenerating day for all their public life? Dare they besmirch a blood-bought heritage with unholy things? Dare they allow jobbery and graft and trickery in their political life? Dare they permit duplicity and baseness in their business life? Dare they cause their social life to rot with immoralities that poisoned the very mainsprings of their race? Might Anzac Day ever keep the national conscience pure and wakeful.

Above all, Anzac Day ought to stand for recognition of the eternal principles of righteousness that lay behind human affairs. The Allies stood together to-day because they insisted to the uttermost that righteousness must prevail and that brutal, lustful, devilishness must cease to be a ruling fact in the life of men. They must hold no parley with evil. God, the acknowledged ruler, against whom sin was a rebellion, must be allowed to guide not only international politics, but also the restless, wilful, hearts of individual men.

ST. MARY'S CATHEDRAL.

The Roman Catholic Cathedral was crowded at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when the High Mass was commenced, with the Rev. E. Brauer as celebrant, Rev. P. Smith as deacon, and Rev. P. M. Horgan as sub-deacon. Students from St. Patrick's College, Manly, assisted in the sanctuary ceremonies, which were under the direction of the Rev. John O'Gorman, administrator of the cathedral. The throne was vacant, Archbishop Kelly being on a visit to the Cooma district.

His Excellency the Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, who was accompanied by Captain Clifford, A.D.C., attended the "memory of the dead" mass and the Governor-General was represented by Captain Haskett Smith, A.D.C. The Lord Mayor (Alderman R. D. Meagher), the town clerk (Mr. Nesbitt), Mr. Travers, M.L.C., Mr. J. E. Barron (Vice-consul for Brazil), and Rev. Father Bede (chaplain, Liverpool) were in the reserved seats. The great congregation included about 800 soldiers, a number of returned soldiers (Anzacs and others), several army nurses, and between 20 and 30 Red Cross Society Voluntary Aids in uniform. The men in khaki were mainly from the Liverpool and Menangle camps. The other military representatives were from Roseville, the Showground, Addison-road, and the Victoria Barracks. Lieutenant Collin represented the District Commandant (Brigadier-General Lee). Captain Brosnan, of the Headquarters Staff, was in charge of the parade. Among the other officers were Colonel Roth, Major Molloy, Captain Cooney, Captain Harold Norrie, Lieutenant Drewitt, Lieutenant Gates (Australian Field Artillery), Lieutenant Harris (New Zealand), and Lieutenant Ryan (New Zealand).

The Liverpool Depot Band, under Bandmaster T. Mellor, played outside the cathedral. As the men took their places Mr. H. Dawkins, in the organ gallery, played Chopin's "Funeral March." Gounod's Easter Mass was sung by the choir under the direction of Mr. W. Asprey. Mrs. Kennedy, Miss May Morgan, Mr. W. Sherley, and Mr. Orme Darvall were the soloists. Novello's choral setting of "In Manus Tuas" was sung at the offertory.

The Rev. E. J. Sydes, S.J., was the preacher. His text was "Amen amen I say to you, unless the grain of wheat falling into the ground die, itself remaineth alone. But if it die it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it and he that hateth his life in this world keepeth unto life eternal." St. John, 12, 24. We are met to-day, he said, in this glorious temple of God to commemorate the baptism in blood of Australia as a nation. We are met to commemorate the men who fought and bled, fought and died, that Australia might be baptised in blood. We are met, as did the Jews with the Maccabees of old in the Jewish temple, to offer sacrifice for the souls of the slain, and not only for the souls of the slain, but also for those who at this moment are laying down their lives or ready to lay them down for their country in the cause of right. With the foundation of the Commonwealth Australia had its birth as a nation as far as Acts of Parliament and a certain additional sentiment can make a nation; but a nation, truly such, like an individual, must be forged in fire—and that the fire of war. But what war? The only war we had visions of was defensive war waged here on our own soil, valiantly and victoriously. Who could have foreseen that it was far across the seas that the select manhood of Australia should be wafted on warlike wings to fight the fight of freedom on behalf of a nation whose territory, though teeming with people, could be contained within one of her own cattle runs. And what baptism of fire could a nation covet more than that given in doing valiant battle for the weak and betrayed against the mighty in a base attempt to dethrone and trample under foot right? What nobler work on earth can there be than the free helping the free to keep their freedom? And we—are we not the freest people on earth? Where is the land that can point to constitutional freedom like ours in Australia, with the ruler in touch and responsible to his advisers, his advisers in touch with the Parliament, the Parliament in touch with and elected by the whole people? With the sturdiness of youth, with its firmer nerve, in a freer air, we have outgrown even the measure of the British Constitution. For the sake of little Belgium, for the preservation of her freedom, for winning it back, the little nation of Australia—for from the point of view of number of people and unprotectedness we are little—picked up the gage of battle. A thing unheard of in the history of the world, a force of 360,000 men, every man a volunteer, crossed the sea from antipodes to antipodes—the men of the Dominion of New Zealand and 300,000 Australians—and joined the Allies. What happened on April 25, 1915, has a fixed place in our history. We celebrate to-day the bravery, the heroism, and the self-sacrifice of the Anzacs. The Gallipoli campaign has been described as "the most glorious failure in military history." But was it a failure to Australia? It has made us a nation. Was not the price worth paying? Are not nations like individuals? If the nation is to be born, if the nation is to live, someone must die for it. "Amen, amen I say unto you, unless the grain of wheat falling into the ground die, itself alone remaineth. But if it die it brings forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it and he that hateth his life in this world keepeth it unto life eternal." And if the nation is called upon to fight for the right as against might and injustice, and the nation refuse, surely the enemy "will come and take away their name and nation." And when the nation is seized with its responsibility, and takes action, and the individual member of a nation loves his life more than right and justice, is he not in a position of one who, loving his life, shall lose it? But if he buckles on his armour and goes out to fight hating his life, that is loving justice and right, more than his life, even though he lose it, his temporal life, he keeps it unto life eternal. And so with the 300,000 Australians who had gone forth voluntarily to do battle for the right and for the weak and for the honour of the world as expressed in a solemn document, how has each of them honoured his manhood? How have they each and all lifted their country on to the loftiest of pedestals, from which, if they continued true to themselves, it will never be deposed? And the price paid? Christ gave His life; as a man He died, as a man He rose. He despised this temporal life, looking, by his death, to gain life eternal. Each of us, too, should be another Christ; not only ready to suffer, but if need be ready to die for the right. And soldiers dying for the right, may they not hope to gaze upon the face of Christ the King, and see upon it the joy which is caused by their good deeds and hear from His lips the words of praise and welcome "Well done. Enter into the joy of the Lord"? And if that be so, who would wish the dead back; rather, who would not wish to change places. For Christ died, and Christ rose. To die is the price of the resurrection. Is the resurrection to be in glory? Then do nobly. "Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friend."

The preacher, in the course of his address, said he had volunteered at the commencement of the war, and he hoped to go to the front in a week or two.

At the end of the mass four Liverpool Camp buglers, under Sergeant Cameron, sounded the Last Post. The Dead March in "Saul" closed the tribute to the Gallipoli heroes.

"THE SPIRIT OF OUR RACE."

The Right Rev. Ronald G. Macintyre, Moderator-General of the Presbyterian Church of Australia, and chairman of the State Recruiting Committee, preaching from the text Matthew iii., 3, "The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord," at St. Stephen's, Phillip-street, at noon yesterday, said it was a grave danger if men were losing the very capacity to respond to the heavenly voice or even to hear it. Would the "lost chord" ever be recovered in our day? Then there came a day in August, 1914, when our race was put to the supreme test, when it hesitated for a moment, then found its soul, and dared all for honour and freedom. Some would-be leaders said that it thundered, for they heard only the German guns already battering the defences of Belgium. Others knew that an angel spake, the heavenly voice of duty of honour, and I thank God that I have lived to see that day when we were not disobedient to the heavenly vision. I am not going to say that every man who stepped from the beaten road of the commonplace was vividly conscious of what his act implied, but I will say that no human would was ever yet moved to the transcendent test of death which his response implied but there passed through him the thrill of a new power, for true heroism is ever spiritual energy. I thank God to-day for the spirit of our race, for that great company of young men who set their feet on the high road of duty, rising in the act to the highest dignity of manhood. We had feared that degeneration had laid its blighting hand upon us; our enemy was sure of it. We stand amazed to-day, but proudly thankful that never in the long story of our nation did the high sense of duty find a nobler answer in the hearts of our manhood and womanhood, for our women are no less worthy than our men, than it has done in these days. If our old men have dreamed dreams, our young men have seen visions.

It was not the lust of battle that called our young men from office and workshop and farm. They came, the very flower of our youth, because through all the clash and thunder of war they knew that the supreme call of the country was come to them. They may put it in their own unconventional language that "it was up to them to do their bit," but the thing was there. Alas, that there are others of the earth earthy who know not the day of their visitation. It was recognised by the men who went and by the wives and fathers and mothers who blessed them in their going that this was no ordinary war, which, won or lost, would only alter some geographical boundaries here and there on the map of the world. All is at stake, not only our own cherished institutions and freedom, but the whole foundation of our Christian civilisation which we have been slowly building up. Should Germany win that hard-won progress would be wiped out in a day, and the gains of the ages flung to the refuse heap. It was the recognition of these things, more or less clearly, which found an echo in the manhood and womanhood of our race throughout our far-flung Empire, and so splendidly in our own Australia, which has sent more men to the front than other of the British dominions beyond the seas. And these men have never faltered, never turned their back to the foe, never refused the task, however great the odds. I hear much of the recreants who selfishly stay behind, but I encourage my heart with the thought of the noble band who answered the call, and with their kinsmen and allies in the fight are saving the world, and, as I believe, preparing the way of the Lord, at a great price. Aye, it is at a great price, a price paid not only by the men who go, but by the dear ones who wait and watch and pray, who sit in the shadow of death, and have not even a grave to weep over. But the sorrow of each is the sorrow of all, and the thrill of thankful pride which comes in the memory of a life cleanly lived and nobly died is the pride of all. Each name is dear to us, for, in words which have a divine sacredness, we say, "he died for us."

And to-day we specially remember the men who first proved to all the world that the Australian climate bred men of the heroic character of the best days of British history, men worthy to stand alongside the glorious 29th Division of the Imperial Army who fought on the same shore. We do no less honour to our kinsmen of the homeland and our brave French allies, though we concentrate our thought to-day upon those who went out from our own midst. On that day which stands in our Australian calendar as in deed and truth a red-letter day, that 25th April, 1915, the day that dawned over the Aegean Sea with golden splendour and set in blood, Australia rose from being a child among the nations to the stature and dignity of her manhood. And now, now on the soil of France and on the sandy wastes of Egypt, our brave lads are face to face with the foe of mankind, and the oppressive curse of Eastern Europe. They are there upholding the honour of the old flag and the credit of the land that gave them birth. God be with them. God be with them in the hour of battle, give them victory, and in the day of death life for evermore.

PITT-STREET CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

A crowded congregation assembled in the Pitt-street Congregational Church to take part in a united memorial service. The pulpit was draped with three Union Jacks, which were in use at Gallipoli, and all the clergy who took part in the service had been there. In addition there were other chaplains, who have not yet crossed the sea. There was khaki in the pulpit, khaki in the choir gallery, and khaki in the pews. In the congregation itself a large proportion were women who have not put off their black garments, and men wearing crepe bands on their hats and round their arms.

Chaplain Gordon Robertson presided at the service, with him were Chaplain F. Colwell and Captain Chaplain Francis, D.C.M., who was a contestant officer as well as a chaplain, and Chaplain J. H. Ramage, Major Hewett, Corporal Dart, and the Revs. W. L. Pattison, President of the Congregational Union; Rev. D. Steed, Chairman of the Baptist Union; Rev. Dr. Roseby, Rev. S. J. Hoban, and the Rev. W. G. Taylor. Amongst those in the church were Mr. S. J. Bredan, representing the Lord Mayor, and representatives of the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, and the President of the Legislative Council.

Punctually at noon Chaplain Gordon Robertson announced that the nation was to-day commemorating April 25, 1915, and asked the congregation to rise and engage for a minute in silent prayer. He then gave out the hymn, "For all the saints who from their labours rest," which was sung, and prayer was offered. The lesson was read from Romans viii., from verse 31.

Captain Chaplain Francis (12th Brigade) delivered the address. On this anniversary of the landing of the Anzacs, he said, we remembered what happened on that day, we remembered that our men made history, so that their names shall be handed down to all generations with glory and lustre. It was a sad day; we could not think of it without sadness, but it was a glorious day. It was a sad day, because it was glorious; it was glorious because it was sad. Those who were there on that day would never forget the experience. His own part in the landing was a very small one; he did not claim to have been there from the beginning, as his division was in reserve, and did not land until the afternoon of the day. But he saw it all from the deck of his ship. It was the duty of his division to come up and consolidate the ground already won, and its landing occupied the afternoon and part of the night of that day. It took possession of the ridge won by the men in the morning, and during the night it entrenched itself. To-day we commemorated the victory won over the enemy—the boasting enemy—on that day. While they were lying in Lemnos harbour they often received messages from the enemy asking when they were coming, and as they had a good reception for them, and why were they hanging back so long. Our men were looked upon as a good joke. We commemorated the deeds of the men who showed the enemy that the Australians were not a joke, and we commemorated those brave lads who now slept there. Chaplain Francis then went on to speak of the causes of the war. There were messages of hope from the war; the message of hope of the unselfish conduct of the British Empire in entering upon it in defence of the smaller nations; of hope in the future of the race; of hope in the future of the world.

Kipling's recessional hymn was sung, and the Rev. Chaplain Colwell offered the concluding prayer, and Chaplain Gordon Robertson pronounced the benediction. The National Anthem was then sung, and Miss Lilian Frost, who presided at the organ, played the Dead March in "Saul," and the Last Post.

SYDNEY GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Anzac Day was fittingly observed at the Sydney Grammar School. At 1.30 p.m. there was an assembly of the school, at which, among a number of old boys, there were present Mr. Justice Street, Judge Rolin, Messrs. A. J. Cape, J. O. Fairfax, F. B. Wilkinson, R. Windeyer, J. H. Clayton, H. MacLaughlin, H. J. Carter, H. R. Grieve, and W. MacDonald.

The acting-headmaster, Mr. A. H. S. Lucas, in opening the proceedings, said that on this day they would think of the men who had fought on Gallipoli, the soldiers who had gone from their own Australia, and their British and French comrades; but especially, and most of all, they would think of the hundreds of their own old boys in the allied forces. And they should not forget those others, who had played their great parts on the other fronts, and who helped to swell the magnificent roll of 1352 old Sydneians whose names they saw on the walls of the big schoolroom.

Mr. Lucas then called upon Mr. Giles, who read from John Masefield's book, "Gallipoli," the thrilling story of the campaign. The crowded schoolroom was hushed as he told how those "giant men" had beaten the enemy to his knees, only to fall back, with the great work still to do, simply for want of the "two more battalions, and a ton of water." "Fifty-seven Sydneians," Mr. Giles concluded, "wrote their names in the story of that campaign with their life's blood. We remember them with sorrow, yes; with pride, yes; but with regret, no. We ask their witness, and we feel sure they would not have had it otherwise."

The senior prefect, Mr. T. Barnett, read the names of those old boys who had fallen, both at the Dardanelles and on other fronts, numbering nearly 200.

The chairman of the trustees, Mr. Justice Street, referred to the German miscalculations and the magnificent record of the Dominions in the war. In his opinion, the First Expeditionary Force was the finest body of men that had left Australia, and it was small wonder that the Turks attributed to the pity of God what was due to lack of reserves and organisation. We acclaimed them as heroes, but we must do more than merely that, we must show, as a nation and in our lives, that we were worthy of their sacrifices. It was better to give than to receive, and, as Mr. Lloyd George had said, a nation is great by what it gives, not by what it gains. He urged the boys to educate themselves to high standards of thought and conduct, so that, at the parting of the ways, they might choose the path of duty, though it lead through the valley of the shadow of death.

Judge Rolin, speaking on behalf of the Old Boys' Union, said that he could best express the thoughts of those old boys who stayed at home in the words of a great Australian, the brother of one of their old boys. He then read a passage by Gilbert Murray, in which he said that the age of heroes had come again, and that the splendid men they had all known and loved were giving their lives for the old men, the women, and the children, who could but stay behind.

Mr. Lucas asked why it was that those who had lived among them before the war had, in a flash, showed themselves as heroes. The secret, he thought, lay in the possession of two qualities—selfrespect and regard for others.

> "Two things stand like stone;
> "Kindness in another's troubles, courage in your own."

These men whose memory they were honouring laid down their lives for them. "We praise them with our lips; let us also praise them in our lives."

The boys then marched out into the park opposite the school, where the school flag was saluted at half-mast.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL.

A memorial service was held yesterday morning in the main hall of the Sydney Girls' High School. The principal (Mrs. Garbin) presided, and there were about 350 girls present.

Mr. H. E. Budden, in the course of an address, described the despatch of the first consignment of War Chest gifts to Gallipoli, and its landing, about 3 a.m., just where the historic landing was made five months previously. He referred to the magnificent work of the women and girls of Australia, who rose to meet the emergency in working so splendidly to keep their brothers, fathers, cousins, and friends at the front in mind of the home-land. Mr. Budden emphasised the value of the gifts, morally and physically, that were sent to the men at the front by the War Chest. The monotony of Gallipoli was absent in France, but there were few luxuries indeed on the men's menu. He was appealing, he said, for 100,000 pairs of socks.

The girls present all promised to make a pair of socks each within a fortnight for the boys at the front.

The commemoration closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

FORT-STREET GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL.

A general assembly, in which all sections of the school were represented, met in the main hall at 10.45 a.m. Several returned Anzacs had accepted the invitation of the principal and staff to be present. Appropriate addresses were delivered by Mr. J. J. Cohen, M.A., M.L.A., Capt. Lawrence, D.S.O., Sergt. Salesbury, M.M., Lieut. M'Queen, and Lieut. Forsyth. A short musical programme included the singing of the hymn "O God, our help in ages past."

Subsequently an adjournment was made to the school grounds, where all surrounded the flag-pole at noon. The flag was flown at half-mast for a few minutes to the memory of the fallen Anzacs.

NEWINGTON COLLEGE.

Anzac Day was observed at Newington College. In the presence of the assembled school the headmaster unveiled two brass plates on the schoolroom walls in memory of two old Newingtonians—one, Lieut. V. T. S. Warry, aged 21 years, who was killed in France; and Sergt. G. R. Lovett, aged 19 years, who was killed at Gallipoli.

Major Buchanan read from Samuel the lament of David over Saul and Jonathan, and the headmaster paid a tribute of respect and affection to the memory of the two young men.

The school was afterwards assembled in hollow square about the flag-pole. The Union Jack was lowered to half-mast in memory of dead Anzacs, and then hoisted to the masthead.

The day was celebrated at the Milson's Point Public School by the school children, in co-operation with the Parents and Citizens' Association. The member for the district, Mr. A. A. Cocks, M.L.A., gave an address on the word "Anzac" and all that it signifies. There was a large attendance. The children sang patriotic airs, and the Union Jack was hoisted half-mast at noon, and then raised to the top two minutes later. A large quantity of potatoes and tinned goods were also supplied by the children in aid of the Graythwaite Hospital, North Sydney.

The girl clerks in the employ of the Mutual Life and Citizens' Assurance Company, Ltd., have again shown practical sympathy with the suffering Anzacs. Yesterday they contributed about 100 gifts, comprising homemade jam, preserved fruits, cigarettes, tobacco, etc., which are to be sent to the Returned Soldiers suffering from mental complaints at Callan Park. They are also sending parcels of tobacco and cigarettes to each member of the company's staff on active service.

IN MARTIN-PLACE.

The recruiting rally in Martin-place marked a scene fully in keeping with the spirit of Anzac Day. No more fitting or sacred occasion could have been selected for an appeal for recruits to restore to their ordinary strength the Australian forces at the front, and to preserve in all its pristine glory their record of imperishable military valour. A tense silence swept over the vast crowd as the band played the Dead March in memory of the fallen men. Heads were uncovered, and the men in khaki on the platforms stood at attention and, with soldierly precision, saluted. Two platforms were set apart for the speakers, who included Captain Coates, Captain Lawrence, D.S.O., Lieutenant Harris, M.C., Lieutenant F. Killeen, Chaplain Captain Colwell, Chaplain the Rev. J. H. Ramage, Sergeants G. Boyd, Boland, Browne, and Saunders, Private F. Fernie, D.C.M., wearing a Scottish soldier's cap, which had been found in a Turk's pocket at Gallipoli, the Mayor of Wagga (Alderman H. Oates), who has enlisted, and who headed over 50 men from that centre, who are going into camp and were present, and the Mayor of Marrickville (Alderman Ness). The lastnamed introduced Miss D. Kinchington, who has several brothers at the front, and who, on behalf of the citizens of Marrickville and Newtown, presented Lieutenant Harris with a handsome banner for his unit. Marrickville, it was stated, was represented by over 3000 men on active service.

"While Germany is undefeated," said Lieutenant Harris, in expressing appreciation of the gift, "we can never do enough. Through the cowardice of men who are staying behind the Australian divisions at the front are being robbed of the full fruits of their efforts. Their very souls are calling out to their fellow men at home: 'Don't let us die in vain.' Some of the noblest men who ever breathed are being condemned almost to certain death because their fellows will not help them in sufficient numbers."

Captain Lawrence, who was wounded both in Gallipoli and in France, spoke of the Australians singing blithely as they went into action, "Australia will be there." But, he added, let it be said "Australia is there."

The men from Wagga Wagga made a strong, purposeful group of hardy young Australians. Enscrolled on little pieces of silk in the lapels of their coats were the following verses:—

> Let God arise to lead forth those
> Who march to war.
> Let God arise and all His foes
> Be scattered far.
>
> Guard the loved ones left behind,
> Give them peace in heart and mind;
> Keep us all in union sweet,
> At our Father's mercy seat,
> Hear us, we beseech Thee.

Cheers that echoed and re-echoed through the crowd went out to the men from Wagga as they marched gaily away to link up with the main procession. Headed by stirring music, and with their flags hoisted aloft in front of them, they made a fine picture. The sacrifices which they had made to enlist were apparently as naught. They were there, amidst the throng, with all the zest of schoolboys. Their leader, Alderman Oates, has a son at the war, and, without any sentimental diction, he told the crowd that he was off to join his boy.

The great mass of people which congregated in the heart of the city extended well into Moore-street, where a platform had been erected for the purpose of allowing an appeal to be made to the eligible young men in the crowd. Standing on the platform were returned soldiers, who had taken part in the historic landing. Two of them had each lost an arm, while their comrades equally claimed the sympathy of the audience by their battle-worn features and bearing.

Each of the men—about six in all—delivered short addresses in rugged, soldierly style, and although their efforts might have been more amply rewarded, there is no doubt that their appeals found a mark in some of the young men who walked away after the meeting—to think it over.

"Is there no young man who wants to join the army?" asked one Anzac, with an empty coat sleeve swinging at his side. "Is there no young man who calls himself a Briton and will not answer the call." Immediately four young men sprang up on to the platform and handed in their names.

"There are women in our midst," he proceeded, "who are holding back their men. In France and Belgium the German hordes still have a powerful grip. They have—need I tell you—what they have done to the old men, women, and girls? But these mothers who hold back their sons—do they ever think of what others mothers have sacrificed for them—four and five sons? And there are men going about this city who say that Australia has done enough. I say that Australia cannot do enough till this war is over. Every man is wanted. I know that is a fact because I have been there and have seen men fall from fatigue."

HAWKESBURY COLLEGE AND THE WAR.

Anzac Day was not forgotten at the annual prize distribution at the Hawkesbury College yesterday. The Minister for Agriculture, Mr. W. C. Grahame, said all arrangements had been made for this gathering before it was known of Anzac Day celebrations, and it could not be altered, but they would join with their fellow citizens in remembering that great morning. The principal of the college would tell them something of what had been done by the students and ex-students of the college to help to win the war. (Applause.)

Mr. Potts said the number of students who enlisted in 1914 was 49, in 1915 18, and in 1916, 11. The ex-students who had enlisted totalled 431, and others, including the staff, brought the total up to 545 young men representative of the college who were fighting at the front. (Loud applause.) Of that number 53 had paid the last call and were sleeping on the blood-stained fields of Gallipoli and France. Thus 27 per cent. of the strength of the college had volunteered, and had been accepted to fight for the Empire. (Loud applause.) The Old Boys' Union deemed it a duty to have the names of their gallant and heroic comrades suitably engraved in brass, and hung in the lecture hall of the college. As far as he could ascertain theirs was the largest percentage of volunteers from any such institution. (Applause.)

They had now with them 27 returned wounded soldiers, who had not previously attended the college, and these men were receiving a training in poultry rearing, etc., which would be useful to them in earning their livelihood. The men were making excellent progress. (Applause.)

THOSE LEFT BEHIND.

LORD MAYOR'S ORATION.

The gathering in the vestibule at the Town Hall gave a realistic though more solemn touch to the celebrations. Here the wives and mothers of fallen soldiers, for the most part dressed in mourning, were entertained by the Joan of Arc Committee, whose efforts are directed towards alleviating the lot of those women who have suffered the loss of relations. Flowers were distributed and light refreshments were provided by members of the committee, while a musical programme, arranged by Miss May Summerbelle, contributed to the success of the function.

The Lord Mayor (Alderman R. D. Meagher), who presided over the gathering, delivered a panegyric of the men of Anzac worthy of the occasion.

"When the smoke is cleared away from this titanic struggle," said the Lord Mayor, "and the historian of the future comes to write of this momentous war, which has shaken the four corners of the earth, one of the proudest chapters will be the heroism of the women of the British Empire. I have no hesitation in saying that the women of the Empire, either as mothers, sisters, or wives, have dyed the Union Jack in every thread with their blood. It is hard to draw the curtain of memory of those who have passed away. This day is a peculiar day—a day mingled with grief and pride; but the mothers of our Australian soldiers will—as they have done for the past two and a half years—suffer without complaint, although the heartstrings are torn asunder."

The speaker paid a tribute to the splendid services of the Red Cross Society, and those who were alleviating the griefs and bodily afflictions which those men had suffered on the burning sands of Mesopotamia and Egypt and the ice-ridden trenches of France. He could think of no illustration that was sufficient to show how the outside nations appreciated what they had done. There were the women of the Red Cross who had worked in desperate circumstances, midst shot and shrapnel fire. They had worked in France and Servia, and in all the allied countries.

This day, with its sunshine and its shadow, would reign supreme in their hearts, and the story of Anzac would be handed down to the future generations.

"It is not for me to refer to the present position," he continued. "There are many who will come back, and there are many who will be absent. And I will say to the widows and mothers here to-day, that that should be the grandest appeal for reinforcements, to take up the cross of liberty where your boys have fallen. As I pick up the newspapers I see the faces of heroes staring me in the face; so in this meeting I can see the faces of heroes asking those lagging behind in Australia to come forward and do their duty to help those heroes who have gone forth to do their work. If we are to have an elite in a democratic country like Australia it will be those men who have saved Australia and her liberty. The proudest sons and daughters of Australia in the days to come will be those who have done their bit. I say there is no healthy-minded Australian daughter who will take a coward for a husband or a father of her children. We must not forget that we as a people owed a solemn obligation to the widows and their dependents. They are entitled to all the happiness and comfort we can give them, and it will rest upon the Federal Government to see that this is carried out."

THE SOLDIERS' CLUB.

There was a function at the Soldiers' Club late yesterday afternoon, when the State Commandant (Brigadier-General Lee) paid his first official visit there, and was entertained at afternoon tea. In honour of the day a laurel wreath against a white background was hung above the entrance of the club, tied with a white ribbon bearing the word "Anzac" in letters of gold. The hall was festooned with silken battalion colours made by the girls of the club patriotic circles. The Commandant was received by Dr. Mary Booth (hon. secretary) and the following members of the executive:—Dr. Pockley (president), and Messrs. J. O. Fairfax, F. G. Sargood, and J. R. Legoe.

A message received by the Commandant from the Governor, congratulating the troops on the afternoon's procession, was read, and greeted with cheers by the soldiers who were present.

Mr. J. O. Fairfax, as vice-president of the club, welcomed General and Mrs. Lee, and took the opportunity of publicly thanking the former for a sympathetic letter he had written concerning the club at the time the institution was being started. Mr. Fairfax also welcomed Colonel Stokes and Mrs. Stokes.

General Lee, in responding, declared, amid applause, that everything possible he could do for the club would be done. He regarded it as a personal legacy from Colonel Wallack, who had asked him to help the club in any way he could. They could not do too much for the returned soldiers. "Whenever I see a returned soldier," said the General, "I feel proud to think that I was born in Australia." Australians, he went on, ranked with the finest fighting forces in the world, as was shown by the fact that the Germans were putting their crack troops against them in the hope of beating the Australians' spirit. That was what no one could do. (Applause.) Their determination and patriotism were such that nothing would stop them. (Applause.)

PARRAMATTA.

At Parramatta a memorial service was held. The first part of the programme was a children's service, held in front of the Town Hall, facing the honour boards. About 2000 children were marshalled, and, after introductory remarks by the Mayor (Ald. Thomas), the Rev. J. A. Pattinson, headmaster of the King's School, addressed the children. Mr. Pattinson said that the children of Germany were taught to sing hymns of hate, but the children of Australia were taught to love—to love and honour those who two years ago had given their lives, not because they were full of hate, but because they loved honour, liberty, freedom, and justice. He asked them to love and venerate that honour board before them, and as they passed to give a thought and sometimes a prayer for the men who had fought to save the Empire. At the conclusion of the address the Mayor read out the names (52) of the local and district soldiers who had given their lives for the Empire. Wreaths were deposited at the foot of the honour boards. A memorial service was afterwards held in the Town Hall, but the building was far too small to accommodate all who desired to attend. Captain-Chaplain T. B. Holmes delivered the address, and Major-Chaplain J. Paterson, Adjutant Beavis, and the Rev. S. M. Johnstone also took part in the service.

FEDERAL ARBITRATION.

CLAIMS OF THE A.W.U.

His Honor entered upon the hearing of the claims of the A.W.U. against the Pastoralists' Federal Council of Australia and other respondents for a new award. The greater part of the day was taken up in preliminary details, and the evidence of the shearers will be taken to-day.

SUPREME COURT.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

CUSTODY OF CHILD.

Mr. H. H. Mason, instructed by Messrs. Betts and Son, of Goulburn (Sydney agents Messrs. Pigott and Stinson), appeared for the applicant, Mrs. Christina May Mayo; and Mr. Clive Teece, instructed by Mr. E. F. Thomas, of Goulburn, for the respondent Mayo, husband of the applicant. Mrs. Mayo applied to the Court for an order that her infant daughter, Caroline Elizabeth Mayo, might be delivered into her hands until such time as the Court saw fit. An alternative order was asked that the applicant might be allowed access to her daughter.

Mrs. Mayo, in her affidavit, stated that she was married in Goulburn to the respondent on January 14, 1914. Her husband was a tobacconist. Differences arose, owing, the deponent alleged, to the husband's threatening behaviour to his wife. As a result, she left her home and went to her father's house at Tirranna, near Goulburn. On January 3 the husband came to Tirranna, and while his wife went out of a room, it is alleged that he took the baby child and cleared away.

Affidavits in reply were read, which generally denied allegations made by the applicant, and also stated that Mrs. Mayo's conduct was responsible for the trouble that had arisen between the parties.

The case is part heard.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

INJUNCTION APPLICATIONS.

Watt v Blackwood.

Mr. E. J. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. F. J. Bethune, instructed by Mr. George A. Raves, appeared for the plaintiff, Peter Bell Johnston Watt; and Mr. D. Maughan and Mr. P. Halse Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Ash and Maclean, for the defendants, J. Blackwood and Son, Ltd., and Ludovic Blackwood.

Recently interim injunctions were granted by his Honor restraining the defendants from proceeding with actions at law against the plaintiff. The matter was now before the Court for a continuance, till the hearing, of the said injunctions.

In his statement of claim the plaintiff set out that he is carrying on the business of iron merchant, under the style of the Structural Engineering Company, at Erskineville, near Sydney. The defendant Ludovic Blackwood was entitled to receive one third of the profits of the business. The defendant, J. Blackwood and Son, Ltd., was a creditor of the business for £5974 and £1475, less sums of £669 9s 6d and £55 17s 6d, payable by the first defendant to the plaintiff. The plaintiff had an overdraft with the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank, Ltd., secured by a guarantee, the plaintiff being the principal debtor, and the plaintiff and Ludovic Blackwood the guarantors. The latter was also a creditor of the business for £666 0s 7d.

Differences arose between the plaintiff and the defendants, and the said bank, having issued writs claiming from the plaintiff £5974 2s 5d, and £3255 19s 11d, an agreement was, on January 5 last, entered into between the plaintiff and the defendants. This agreement provided that, on the payment to Ludovic Blackwood of £4500 he should cease to have any further interest in the business. Payment off of the said overdraft and of the amount due to the defendants, was also provided for. Besides the payment of the £4500, sums of £1000, £1000, £6306, £1000, £1000, due by the Commonwealth Government under contract to the plaintiff, were to be applied to the payment of the plaintiff's indebtedness to the defendants. The plaintiff was to be allowed not more than £1000 out of the said £6300. It was further agreed that until default was made further proceedings under the writs should be stayed. Payments of £6500, due under the agreement, were made by the plaintiff, and accepted by the defendants. The plaintiff further alleges, that contrary to the terms of the agreement, the bank filed a declaration in its action, and the plaintiff was compelled to settle it by paying £1302 16s 5d and costs. This sum the plaintiff claims should be credited him by the defendants. The plaintiff assigned the said Government contracts to the defendants, and the latter wished the plaintiff to execute a bill of sale, but there was disagreement as to its terms. About the 3rd and 10th insts. the respective defendants began actions at common law against the plaintiff. The latter states that he is willing to execute the said agreement so far as it remains on his part to be performed. He asks the Court to declare that he has made no default which entitles the defendants to proceed with the said actions, and he asks that they be restrained by injunctions from so doing.

The defendants contended that, under the agreement, it was a term that until default was made by the plaintiff in his payments, proceedings would not be taken against him. It was alleged that the plaintiff had made default, and, therefore, the defendants were entitled to proceed with these actions at common law.

The case is part heard.

Clayton v Stewart.

On the ex parte application of Mr. D. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. W. R. and F. B. Jones, his Honor continued the interim injunction against the defendant, James Milne Stewart, of Cremorne, restraining him from proceeding with his action at common law against the plaintiff, Herbert J. Clayton, of the Coogee Picture Palace. The matter at issue relates to a commission charge connected with the erection of the building.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

ACCESS TO CHILD.

Howell-Price v Howell-Price.

Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by Mr. H. D. Braund, appeared for the petitioner, Adelaide Olive Ivy Howell-Price; and Mr. W. C. Moseley, for respondent, David Clayton Winchcombe Howell-Price; but only on the question of access to the child. His Honor, on the 18th instant, granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months, for dissolution of the marriage and the question of access to the child was postponed. Mr. Moseley now intimated that arrangements had been privately made for access to the child by its grandmother. He, therefore, withdrew the application made last week.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

CREDITOR'S PETITION.

Re William M'Carron, formerly of Canbelego, hotelkeeper, but now of Sydney, ex parte Wright, Heaton, and Co., of 95 Pitt-street, Sydney, carriers. Petition to be heard on the 4th prox.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Judge Rolin.)

A BLACKSMITH'S STRIKER.

Mr. Bavin, instructed by Mr. J. S. Cargill, Solicitor for Railways, appeared for the Railway Commissioners (appellants); and Mr. M. Connington, for the Federated Ironworkers Assistants' Union of Australia, respondents. This was an appeal by the Railway Commissioners against an order of the Chief Industrial Magistrate, on February 28 last, by which the appellants were directed to pay to one, W. Clancy, an employee in their department, the sum of £2 16s 1d, with £1 14s costs.

His Honor reserved judgment.

DISTRICT COURT.

In the suit in which David Wilson secured a verdict against Abrahams and Williams, Mr. Breckenridge, instructed by Mr. H. E. M'Intosh, appeared for the plaintiff.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker.)

BATCH OF PRISONERS SENTENCED.

His Honor imposed sentences upon the following prisoners who had been adjudged guilty during the current sittings of the Court:—Collins Fletcher, assault and robbery, five years' penal servitude; William Lynam, feloniously receiving stolen property, four years; John Bowden, perjury, six months in Goulburn Gaol; Edward Hudson, perjury, twelve months in Parramatta Gaol; Arthur Lewis, receiving stolen property, two years; William Mazzeo, receiving stolen property, three years; Frank Williamson, conspiracy to defraud, four years; Ivy Ethel Rutledge Newton, false pretences, three counts, twelve months on each count, the sentences to be concurrent.

In sentencing Newton, his Honor said that she had cruelly taken the savings of a young nurse and spent the money on gambling. She had also taken down various people, according to the police, for amounts running into some hundreds of pounds. It seemed to him that when the gambling spirit got hold of a woman it was as evil for her as the drink habit, and he expected now that the Government had legalised gambling, and was about to take a part of the proceeds, he would find many more women in trouble because of its influence.

In the case of the man Williamson his Honor said that he had attributed his downfall to a sentence of two years that he himself had imposed on the prisoner in 1886. However, he did not agree with the prisoner that that sentence could be blamed. Against the one statement he had others that a firm sentence had brought men to their senses. One man had met him in the street on one occasion and thanked him for his firmness, explaining that now he was in a lucrative position, having been pulled up by the firmness of the sentence.

NOTES.

The usual monthly meeting of the Sporting Club was held on the 18th inst. There was a good attendance of members. The secretary reported the club to be in a good financial position, everything going well, and membership increasing.

Mr. T. Davenport, of Gordon, has transferred his brindle bulldog, Lord Scattercash, to a fancier in the country.

At a committee meeting of the Pomeranian and Toy Dog Club of New South Wales, held on the 24th inst at Station House, it was decided to hold a championship show on July 6 and 7. With this in view, the hon. secretary (Miss C. P. Brooke) was instructed to write to the Kennel Club of New South Wales (incorporated) for permission to hold the same under their rules, and also for championship rank. The show is to be held earlier this year owing to the very large numbers of inquiries and applications already received about it. Further particulars will be available next week. Special privileges will be granted to financial members, such as trophies, etc. There is evidence of entries being received for Maltese, Schipperkes, Chow Chows, and also of a number of new importations being benched.

LATE MR. ALBAN GEE.

Although it was known that Mr. Alban Gee had been in bad health for some time, his death last Saturday was unexpected. For several years he was president of the Kennel Club of New South Wales, and he was also a vice-president of the Royal Agricultural Society for a considerable period. In the latter capacity he took a keen interest in the dog section of the Royal Shows. He took an active part in the control of canine affairs, from which he retired when fanciers started disagreements. Mr. Gee was a liberal patron of the Kennel Club and also of the Bulldog Society, of which he was president.

A few years ago his bulldog kennels were among the best in Australia. He owned Ch. Bargee, Battle Royal, and The Pilot, the latter being the best dog he had bred. He also imported, for about £120, that excellent bitch Bankside Gem, recently deceased, which he re-sold to Messrs. Clarke and Pattrick for about £75. Mr. Gee's portrait, biographical sketch, and an account of his funeral appeared in last Monday's "Herald." The only bulldog-man present at the funeral was Mr. A. W. Wilkins. Mr. Greg. Keighery (greyhounds) and Mr. Crane, two old friends, were also at the graveside.

EXHIBITS FOR JAPAN.

Some time ago the Premier was asked by the Vice-consul for Japan to supply photographs and specimens of Australian products for the museum at Pokushimes, Shikoku, Japan. Arrangements have now been made with the curator of the Technological Museum for the despatch of timber, mineral, and marble specimens.

LOVE SHALL BE FIRST.

BY ARTHUR W. MARCHMONT.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

She asked him about Canadian life, and he told her many experiences of his own and others, drawing a fascinating picture of its vigour and freedom and charm. He could talk well, and had wit enough to choose just the points which appealed to her closely, and to describe them tersely and vividly.

"You make me wish to see it all for myself," she exclaimed, after one of his little word pictures.

"Is it so different from your own life?" he asked.

"Yes, indeed," she replied with a sigh, and then started as she glanced at her watch. "But you have made me forget the time. We must go back," she exclaimed, getting up quickly.

"Not yet. I have something else to tell you," he urged.

"I'm afraid it must wait. There will be plenty of time; we are not leaving the hotel yet. Mrs. Arbuthnot ——"

"Your mother, you mean?"

She turned to him and laughed. "Why do you say that?"

"It is what they think at the hotel, but I did not believe it possible. The something I wished to tell you is about her."

Her expressive face clouded for an instant, and she shook her head. "We had better go back now," she said. "Where is Harriet?"

As if in answer to the question, there was a loud snore from the other side of the tree by which they stood, and they both smiled.

"It would be a shame to wake her yet," suggested Frank, with a smile. "Give me a few more minutes at least. There is a lovely walk among the trees here."

"Really I ought not," she said; but she did, and let him lead her away.

"If I am a little uncouth, you must set it down to my being a colonial. We learn to speak our thoughts freely, you know. I was sure Mrs. Arbuthnot was not your mother, and I'm very glad to know it."

She did not smile this time, but looked questioningly at him. "I don't see why you should be glad."

"I'm going to explain. The moment I saw you I determined, if possible, to get to know you, and she would not let me;" and he told her frankly what had passed between him and Mrs. Arbuthnot. "You'll see, of course, that if she had been your mother it would have been infinitely more difficult for me to do what I told her about getting a conventional introduction."

"I—I dont' know," she said hesitatingly, after a pause.

"But I do," he declared confidently. "For, after all, she is only what I named her in my thoughts."

"What is that?"

He laughed. "The Sentinel—and a very efficient one, too."

This brought a laugh in response. "Is it a Canadian custom to nickname people in that way?" she rallied. "Perhaps you have one for me?"

"I have," he nodded.

"Well?" she said, challenging him with her eyes.

"I called you the—the Lodestone."

Her eyes fell instantly, and she bit her lip. "You mean that a girl should be a sort of flint," she said, trying to speak lightly. "Scarcely complimentary."

"The quality of a lodestone is its attraction," he ventured earnestly.

She did not answer for a while. "You think, then, that your accident has led to an introduction which is sufficiently conventional?" she asked, keeping her face averted.

"No," he said, smiling. "Not at all conventional, and not—an accident."

This brought her eyes on him in surprise. "But you weren't trying to drown yourself, surely?"

"Oh dear, no. I heard by chance that you were going to be on the lake, so I took the plug out of the boat and arranged for it to sink when you would be obliged to come to the rescue, and then pretended I couldn't swim. I told you I was determined to know you."

"I ought to be really angry, Mr. Carton."

"I had to take that risk, of course; but I couldn't help owning up all the same. I had to do something, you see, and this seemed such a splendid chance."

"And you're not ashamed of having played such a trick?"

"Not the least bit in the world. I am only glorying in the success of it. The end more than justifies the means."

"Well, it must be the end, for I must really go back to the hotel."

"The Sentinel?" he asked with a smile.

But she looked very grave. "Yes, the Sentinel. You—you don't understand."

"But I wish to. You are so different when you are with her; so grave, so subdued, so—so sad, often. You, who are made for just brightness and laughter."

She sighed heavily. "You don't understand," she repeated.

"Then why not tell me?"

She shook her head. "It is impossible; impossible."

"That's a word I can't spell. I don't ask it now, but perhaps you may come to feel some day you can trust me and ——"

She turned at once. "It is not that. I would trust you now, but ——" She broke off and laughed; a forced laughter with no happiness in it. "It is nothing very dreadful, but ——" and again she paused, ending with a shrug of the shoulders. "I will tell you; but not now. I must go now, or I shall be missed. To-morrow, or when we meet next." She spoke hurriedly and quickened her steps.

"I'll row you back," he said as they saw the old servant in the distance packing up the luncheon basket.

"No, no, no!" she cried vehemently.

"But I am really not afraid of a hundred Sentinels," he declared laughingly. "And, of course, she must know about—about this."

She was about to protest with the same vehemence, but checked the words, stopped and smiled. "I don't believe you could be afraid of anything." and indeed he looked it as he smiled down upon her. Confident, self-reliant, resolute, and compelling, he seemed to her a veritable tower of strength.

"There is one thing I should fear—to offend you," he said earnestly.

"Then you mustn't come back with me, and must say nothing of—of this until to-morrow," she said appealingly.

"As you will. Until to-morrow."

"Good-bye, then," and she held out her hand.

"Good-bye?" he queried quickly.

"Until to-morrow," she answered in a low tone and with a nervous hurried smile.

"That's better. Until to-morrow." Their hands closed in a warm clasp, and she hurried back to the old servant, and then on to the boat where Sandy was waiting.

Frank lingered on, looking eagerly after the boat until it was a speck in the distance, and at last was hidden by a jutting bluff of the shore. Then he set out for the hotel, dreaming dreams and building castles which were to materialise on the morrow.

He was in no mood for company, and spent the rest of the day until bed-time wandering about alone, smiling jubilant at having outwitted the Sentinel, and without a thought of any counter-attack from her.

But he knew better the next morning when he went down to breakfast, intending to tell her at the first opportunity and wondering what she would say and do. His first glance was at their usual table; but they were not there.

There were several letters for him, and the top one was in a woman's handwriting, and unstamped. A wild hope flashed into his thoughts—that it was from the Lodestone—and he tore it open feverishly.

"We are leaving. Try not to blame me, but just forget.—Muriel."

CHAPTER II.

THE SEARCH.

Frank accepted Mrs. Arbuthnot's counter-attack with a smile of unshaken determination.

"She has scored, but it won't make any difference in the end," he told himself; and, with characteristic promptness, he set about repairing the defeat. He ascertained that Mrs. Arbuthnot's departure had been suddenly decided upon in the evening some hours after Muriel must have returned from the lake excursion; that there had been very hurried packing, followed by a departure for Callander. No address had been left for letters to be forwarded, and Frank could easily guess why.

Within an hour of the receipt of Muriel's letter he was on his way to Callander. This was the nearest railway station, and he soon found that they had caught a train to Stirling. He followed, and, after very little trouble, discovered the hotel at which they had stayed for the night, and that they had only left an hour before his arrival to go to the station on their way to London.

"Serves me right for letting that dragon of a woman pull the wool over my eyes last night and give me the slip," was Frank's reflection. "All the same, I didn't expect to win through without some trouble. London's a big place, but there can't be very many Arbuthnots in it; and I must just hunt her up."

He motored back to the Trossachs, cleared up his arrangements there, left his address in town—the Ritz Hotel, on the off chance of another letter coming from Muriel, and went to London determined to find her if it was humanly possible. But he recognised that it would be a big job.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES.

NOTIFICATION of the Receipt of an Application by the Council of the Shire of Warringah for Additional Power under the Local Government Act, 1906, and Acts amending the same.

His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, hereby notifies that the Council of the Shire of Warringah has made application under Section 110 of the Local Government Act, 1906, as amended by subsequent Acts, to acquire the right to exercise the power of paragraph (XV.) of Section 109 of the said Act, as so amended, viz.: The provision and maintenance and management of public cemeteries.

Any number of ratepayers not less than fifty (or if there be less than 300 ratepayers on the roll not less than one-sixth of the ratepayers) may petition the Governor within sixty days after 13th April, 1917, the date of the notification in the "Government Gazette" of the Council's application, to direct that a poll of ratepayers of the area be taken on the question whether the power applied for shall be conferred on the Council. Any such petition should be sent under cover to the Minister, and must comply with the provisions of Ordinance No. 21 under the Local Government Acts.

JOHN D. FITZGERALD,
Minister.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

The question of to-day, of to-morrow, and of every succeeding day, is

HAVE YOU USED PEARS' SOAP? If you have not, you have not done your duty by your skin and complexion. If, on the other hand—that is, on both hands and on the face, and on the skin generally—you HAVE used PEARS', you can feel happy, for you will have done the best that possibly can be done for the skin's health and beauty. There can be no question about that.

PEARS' has been making beautiful complexions for nearly 120 years.

ON THE LAND.

WILD DOG PEST.

Stockowners in the north-western corner of the State are still facing the wild dog trouble. Some time ago representatives of western stockowners approached the Minister for Lands for assistance in the matter. Mr. Ashford was sympathetic, realising that the pest was so serious that the danger existed of a large area of country carrying sheep being either abandoned or given over to cattle, which would mean a decrease in the number of individual holdings. Accordingly, the Government offered to lend £10,000 for the purpose of making the Queensland fence dog-proof east for another 150 miles. The conditions of the loan were that the lessees who would benefit would consent to be responsible for the repayment of their proportion in 20 equal annual instalments, and interest at 5 per cent. per annum, to be collected either through Pastures Protection Boards or by a trust formed for the purpose.

At a conference of stockowners held at Bourke recently it was announced that the proposal had fallen through, owing to the failure to get the bond signed. The total area affected is 15,200,000 acres (an illustration of the vastness of this country), which is held by 114 lessees, who were asked if they would consent to be responsible for the repayment of their proportion of the loan, based on the area of their holding at the rate of £1 per 1000 acres. As a result 43 were willing to sign the bond, representing an area of 4,924,000 acres, providing £4924; six, representing an area of 5,581,000 acres, and liability £5581, gave doubtful answers; 21 owners with an area of 2,624,000 acres, amount £2624, were unwilling to sign the bond, and no replies were received from 44 owners, with an area of 2,071,000, amount £2071. These lessees are all in the Bourke, Wanaaring, and Wilcannia districts. As it was impossible to accept the Government's proposal, the matter was further considered, and it was decided in the meantime to erect 46 miles of dog-proof fence on the Queensland border, to complete the fence between Berawinnia and Caiwarro boundaries, to stop dogs coming in from Queensland, the cost to be met by voluntary subscription. It was estimated the fence would cost about £44 per mile. The following committee was appointed to receive donations, manage, and erect the fencing:—Messrs. E. M. Davis, W. T. P. Stalley, H. Gibbons, H. S. Officer, and A. C. Gibbs. Mr. M'Williams (Fort Bourke) was appointed an ex-officio member of the committee, to act as business agent in Bourke.

It was also decided that for the completion of the border fence, and the erection of any other check fences within the State, a number of pastoralists should approach the Government as soon as possible, to secure an amendment of the P.P. Act, so that the boards can erect dog-proof fences and have the power to levy a special rate on landowners to pay the cost. Messrs. Williamson, Leigo, M. Robinson, Baird, W. W. Killen, E. Killen, A. E. Christian, and T. Waddell were appointed a deputation for this purpose, with power to add to their number. The deputation will also ask the Government to pass a strict Registration Act—to affect the Western Division—calling for a fee on all tame dogs of not less than 10s per head, such fee to include the cost of a special collar—to be supplied annually by the Government, to all owners who pay the fee.

As has already been pointed out in these columns, this wild dog pest is a very serious matter, and it can be depended upon that the Government will lend a sympathetic ear to the request from these lessees who are battling out back. Otherwise a considerable area of country may be abandoned. It was understood, when the matter was last under notice, that the Government was to consider whether the making of the Queensland fence along the border dog-proof should not be treated as a national work. It was proposed to make the existing fence dog-proof as far as the Barwon River, a distance of about 280 miles, the cost being estimated at £50 per mile.

SEASON IN THE WEST.

The absence of rain in many parts of the Western district is interfering to some extent with ploughing and seeding operations for the coming season's crop. Although the rainfall has been abnormal for the summer, there has been a dry period following, and the ground has become very hard. The conditions ruling during the summer prevented very little fallowing being done, and the result is that farmers are all behind with their work. While it is generally considered the area under wheat will be less than last season, the guarantee will influence many farmers in making special efforts to sow all they can. The man with a limited area will, of course, be compelled from necessity to do this, as his income is largely derived from wheat. It will be on the larger areas and on holdings that were share-farmed that some decrease may be expected. There has been so much delay and hesitancy with regard to the operations of the pool that the farmers are disappointed. Rain would improve the outlook considerably, provided the weather continued mild.

There are indications of an early winter. There have been frosts and cold weather experienced during the last week. There is an abundance of grass, and in many paddocks the succulent undergrowth that is keeping stock and sheep in fine condition.

EXPORT OF SKINS.

Regarding the export of skins to America, the Acting Premier has been advised that the Department of Trade and Customs has no objection to the shipment of furred skins, other than rabbitskins, to approved consignees, without restriction as to destination. With regard to rabbitskins, applicants must produce a certificate from the Commonwealth buying agents that such skins are not required by the Defence Department.

RAILWAY RATES.

DEPARTMENT NON-SUITED.

BATHURST.—At the Bathurst Police Court, before Mr. C. Jennings, S.M., the New South Wales Railway Commissioners proceeded against E. K. Rutledge, of Esrom, and formerly of Nevertire, for the recovery of £12 14s 6d, being the difference in the amount paid by defendant on concessional rates, and the amount representing full rates on stock consigned by defendant and carried from Bathurst to Nevertire.

Frederick Williams, late stationmaster at Bathurst, stated that Rutledge had ordered trucks for the stock. It was the custom for persons ordering trucks to state whether they were required for fat stock or stores; in the case of fat stock, the trucks were generally made available on the day of application, full rates being charged, but in the case of store stock, for which there was a third concession in the charge, the trucks were supplied at the convenience of the department. Portion of the trucks allowed Rutledge were given at the concession rates. Evidence by other railway officials went to show that the defendant on being asked for the fat stock rates for the Nevertire consignment refused, he contending that as the stock were store the department was bound to make the concession.

In his evidence defendant stated that the Railway Department must know that nothing but store stock would be consigned to such centres as Nevertire, and produced the stock inspector's certificate, showing that the stock in question were in a starving condition.

Mr. Kenny, counsel for defence, stated that in the matter of travelling stock, the Railway Department was chaotic. Even the officials themselves did not follow the regulations, but seemed to adhere to custom.

The magistrate remarked that he took it the railway service was for the convenience of the public. It would be extraordinary to ask the owners of stock going west to pay the full amount. The regulations were very complicated, and if the railway officials themselves could not understand them, how were they to expect the public to follow them? The evidence in the present case had shown that the person requisitioning for trucks had not been specifically asked whether they were for store or fat cattle, it being assumed that they were for fats, and the requisition forms accordingly not being endorsed. It was a simple matter for the official concerned to ask the sender the nature of the travelling stock. He would non-suit the plaintiff department, and if it thought he was not right it could try elsewhere.

CARRIAGE OF STOCK.

BATHURST.—At the last meeting of the Bathurst Pastures Protection Board the question of the transit of stock on the railways was discussed. Some of the directors asserted that stationmasters had refused to accept travelling stock permits. The board decided to write to the Railway Commissioners on the matter, and has now received the following statement explaining the department's latest policy concerning the carrying of stock:—"The latest instructions issued to the staff in connection with the treatment of permits and travelling statements for live stock forwarded by rail are:—Consignors of stock are to be requested to hand to the station officials permits and travelling statements for stock desiring transit. These documents are to be handed to the guard of the train conveying stock to their destination, where, on arrival, the guard will hand such documents to the stationmaster, who must retain them for delivery to the local stock inspector in those cases where the actual destination of the stock coincides with the unloading station. When, however, the destination of stock is some distance from the railway station it will be necessary for the stationmaster to hand over the forms to the person in charge of the stock to enable him to proceed to his destination. If the permits or statements are not handed in stationmasters must press for same to be presented for their inspection, and if this is refused the local police should at once be informed; but the despatch of the consignment is not to be delayed by refusal to furnish the documents in question."

BUTTER DONATIONS.

The following circular has been issued to all dairy factories in the State, by the Australian Red Cross Society, and the Citizens' War Chest Fund, under the auspices of the Sydney Butter Exporters' Association:—

"Your valued contributions of butter to the Chamber of Commerce War Food Fund (which is now closed) were greatly appreciated, and the object of this letter is to make a joint and earnest appeal to you on behalf of the 'Red Cross' and 'War Chest' Fund for the renewal of monthly donations from all butter factories in New South Wales.

"The 'Red Cross' Society is supplying a large quantity of butter monthly in 1lb tins for Australians who are prisoners of war in Germany, and probably this will have to be considerably increased in the near future. Their kitchen in Sydney gives tea daily to a large number of soldiers and invalids, and the sick and wounded, in England, France, and here, will much appreciate the continuance of your generosity.

"The 'War Chest' Fund has established a club in London for the use of Australian soldiers on leave; this is being wonderfully well patronised. This club is serving 3500 meals per day, and, notwithstanding the high advance in food stuffs, is specially desirous of keeping its tariff at the old fixed rate.

"Consequently we solicit a regular monthly contribution because same will be of inestimable value to those two worthy organisations. We are advised by the secretary of the Butter Exporters' Association that every agent will take care of all contributions of butter, and Messrs. Foley Bros. have kindly agreed to cold store same free of charge. Please advise your agent of any contributions sent forward, they will advise Messrs. Foley Bros. in due course."

The following particulars are furnished also:—

The hon. secretary of the War Chest Fund advises having received the following particulars of the services of the War Chest Club, London, for the week ended January 28, 1917:—

Breakfast	4390
Dinner	8805
Tea	7645
Supper	2749
Meal Books	540
Shakedowns	842
Beds	4401

In addition to these items the lockers, baths, billiard-room, etc., were freely used by the soldiers.

The joint hon. secretary of the Australian Red Cross Society (New South Wales division) states that 16,000 tins of butter have already been despatched to Australian prisoners of war through the Red Cross, and 2200 tins are required monthly. 600 invalids at Randwick Hospital and George's Height camp are served daily with morning and afternoon teas through the Red Cross kitchens.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

COONAMBLE.—A very large number of entries have been received for the show, which is to open next week. The cattle and sheep sections are especially strong. Prospects point to the show being a record one.

AGRICULTURAL SHOWS.

WINGHAM.—The Wingham show was held in fine weather. There were about 3000 entries. An outstanding exhibit was the poultry section, with 405 entries. The pig section has for years past been a feature, and this year in all classes the exhibit was, if anything, slightly in advance of previous years. In horses the blood classes were poorly represented, the draughts only fairly, but light and miscellaneous horses were well in evidence. The quality of every class of cattle shown was superior to anything shown during the past decade. In beef breeds, Devons of excellent kind and quality were well to the fore. Polled Angus were a fine lot. Durhams were also fairly represented. In the dairy classes a beautiful lot of Channel Island cattle, mainly Jerseys, were to be seen. Ayrshires were in a minority, and there was a good show of milking Shorthorn and grade cattle.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

EXTERMINATING ANTS.

"H.F."—Place about 2oz of cyanide of potassium in a two-gallon watering can filled with water, and pour the mixture down the ant holes.

POULTRY.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Baldry (Chatswood).—Some of the heavy breeds of fowls, when two or three years old, develop what is termed a slack crop, which means that a quantity of the contents does not find its way to the intestinal channels, but remains in the crop. The other trouble is known amongst poultry keepers as "down behind," and while occasionally is an accumulation of fat, at other times is of a dropsical nature. In both cases the fowls may be otherwise healthy, but they are never profitable, the trouble increasing with age.

H. R. M. (Concord).—The fact of a black chicken coming from eggs of a purely white breed is certainly evidence of a recent or remote alliance with some black breed. It will neither be of interest or benefit to breed from this stray.

Inquirer.—White Leghorns, White Plymouth Rocks, and White Wyandottes should have yellow legs; the legs of White Orpingtons should be white. The eggs of all except Leghorns are brown or tinted in colour.

W. W.—If your purpose is to breed Rhode Island Reds for market purposes you should be able to get a breeding pen at from 10s 6d to 21s each bird. If you require them for show purposes or to breed show stock, four or five birds will cost you locally from £12 to £20. If you import them you can double the above figures, and perhaps get inferior birds.

Gosford.—Will the correspondent of last week regarding poultry farming send his name and address.

Woy Woy.—Your distance from the Sydney market is not prohibitive; in fact, both poultry and eggs can be sent almost at as low a rate as from the outer Sydney suburbs. The Railway Commissioners supply coops free on application to the local stationmaster.

Laverack.—You have not forwarded a schedule; hence no notice.

"Anxious to Know."—Pollard with a little bran mixed with water to a crumbly state is the usual food for young ducklings. Later, for the best results, the meals should be mixed with soup, or in its absence a little meat of some sort, with grain at evening. A dish of water should always be convenient to the feeding trough. Many breeders do not use the hens to mother the ducklings, and are quite successful.

Hitherto purebred poultry sales have been confined to three auctioneering firms at the Municipal Markets. By reference to yesterday's business columns of the "Herald," it will be seen that two more houses purpose catering for this business. Poultry farmers requiring stock will thus have more choice as to where and what to purchase.

When remarking in this column of the success of three interstate exhibitors at the Royal Show, a fourth was overlooked—Mr. E. Dwyer, of Glenferrie, Victoria. This breeder confines himself to Minorcas, and at the late Moore Park event, he scored first in a class of 18 hens, first amongst 13 pullets, a third each in the cock and cockerel classes, and second in the breeding pen classes amongst 14 competitors.

The hon. secretary of the Goulburn Poultry Pigeon and Canary Club forwards the schedule for the 13th annual show, which was to be held on April 20 and 21, but is postponed. Classes are given for the various breeds of fowls, with fair prize money, and quite a number of specials. Mr. H. Thorburn is hon. secretary.

The secretary of the Hawkesbury Agricultural Association forwards the schedule for the forthcoming show, which is the 25th annual one. Poultry, as always at the Hawkesbury, monopolises a big portion of the programme, and at the forthcoming event for this section, including pigeons, there are 120 classes provided, with 12s 6d prize money in each. For a number of years the committee of this association gave special prizes and prominence to table poultry. These classes have been discontinued.

The rise in eggs to 2s 6d per dozen during the present week was not unexpected, the late twopence advance being due solely to the vagaries of the weather. Excessive rains, winds, and other untoward climatic conditions always affect laying, and particularly in the early winter, which is the resting time of most adult fowls, while the young ones, which should lay, are at this period erratic.

Thorpes, Ltd., forward their monthly notes for April. Type in relation to, laying, modern methods in poultry keeping, and other subjects of interest to breeders are intelligently discussed. The advice given is sound throughout.

If you cannot sleep a few doses of Clements Tonic taken regularly for a few days will banish Insomnia, and bring healthful, refreshing sleep. Try it. All chemists.—Advt.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

CONCRETE ROADS.

There can be no question that concrete is an ideal substance for road-making. The point upon which doubt exists is whether it should be used as a foundation only or whether it should also form the surface. Mr. Sandston, the American consulting engineer, now in Australia, says that it must be surfaced with some other material. Mr. John Fanning writes:—"The trouble with municipal bodies and engineers associated with councils is that they lack sufficient knowledge of concrete, and look upon it as so much material in the mass just to be spread out to the required thickness. Anyone conversant with concrete should be aware that a chemist is almost as necessary as water to the manufacture." Mr. Fanning is also of opinion (and here he joins issue with Mr. Pollitser in the "Herald" of last Thursday) that reinforced concrete should be used where there is any special object to be gained. "Reinforced concrete, however, requires a little more knowledge on the part of the engineer than the mere mixing of sand, cement, and metal."

* * *

HEAVY RATES.

Mr. G. H. Greenwood, of Redfern, objects to the statement recently made in these columns that the fear of being cast out at election time will prevent a council inflicting excessive rates. He points out that the tenant or occupier vote is much stronger than that of the owner. "Take the case of one ratepayer owning a terrace of nine houses; the owner would only have one vote against the tenants' nine, and it stands to reason that the tenants would be absolutely indifferent as to the high or low rates, because they do not have to pay, and, therefore, take very little interest in municipal affairs." Another correspondent suggests a way out of the difficulty. He proposes to make the tenant directly responsible for any increase of rates. In his view the property owners should all write to their tenants notifying them that if there is any increase in rates next year the additional amount will be added on to the rent.

* * *

PASSING THE RATES ON.

The honorary secretary of the Wentworthville and Westmead Ratepayers' Association writes to complain that the arrears of rates on a subdivision have been passed on to the purchasers. In his view the council should have enforced payment against the vendor of the land, and he thinks the council is wrong in apportioning the debt among the buyers. The council, however, is acting under a direct authority from the Local Government Act, which says (Section 135):—"Where any land has been subdivided, and a portion sold or let, the valuation of such land may be altered, and such valuation and any unpaid rates due on such land may be apportioned by the council." It is another matter to decide whether the council acted with strict justice in passing this indebtedness on. A council is a hardheaded business concern, and usually its best policy is to recover moneys from those who are easiest to get hold of.

FRIENDLY APPEAL COURTS.

There has been a great amount of argument at North Sydney, Mascot, and various country councils over the appointment of Friendly Appeal Courts. At one time these courts were very popular, but there has been a growing feeling against them on the part of the councils. The valuer is under oath to do his work impartially, and to the best of his judgment. The law provides that any person aggrieved can present his claims to a magistrate, and have the valuation reconsidered. A Friendly Appeal Court is an entirely informal invention, and consists of a conference between aldermen, the valuer, and those who complain that the valuations are excessive. Some valuers decline altogether to attend these conferences. They assert that the question too often is decided on personal grounds, and that friendship counts more than facts. This year, with elections in the near future, there has been a stronger protest than ever against the holding of these so-called courts.

* * *

TINY-TOWN CIVICS.

Although one of the beneficial effects of the Local Government Act has been to squelch wardism, it still lingers. Perhaps one of the most striking instances is that of the Government Housing Board, which insists that the Mascot Council shall spend in Daceyville every penny of rates raised in Daceyville. It enforces this request with the threat that it will have Daceyville gazetted as no longer part of the municipality. At last meeting of the Central Illawarra Council an alderman moved that the municipality should be divided into two separate ones. This was the outcome of ill-feeling between the wards, two of which he claimed paid the rates. He also said that he heard that at next municipal elections there would be 26 Labour candidates, and he "did not want to be ruled by red-raggers."

* * *

A DUCK FARM NEXT DOOR.

"J.F." writes to set out a real grievance, which is, unfortunately, a very common one. The allotment next door to his residence is being turned into a duck farm. In his case he claims he has no remedy against the owner of the land, because the owner went away to the other side of the world many years ago, and has never been heard of since. "J.F." looks hopefully to the Local Government Act to provide some help to him in his troubles. No such remedy offers. The Act in various cases gives a means of suppressing a public nuisance—that is, one which affects a great number of people. It does not go into the question of differences arising between neighbour and neighbour. In Manly there is a special ordinance preventing the keeping of poultry within a distance of 25 feet from any dwelling, but no other council has adopted this law.

* * *

THE PAYMENT OF WORKMEN.

The recent award of the No. 4 Board has been received by municipal workmen with considerable dissatisfaction. There has been a strike of sanitary labourers at Forbes. Another strike was recently threatened at Lidcombe. At Bulli Shire the sanitary employees want 1s 2d per day over the award rates, even though the award granted them an additional 10d on what they formerly received. In Wollongong it is claimed that the increased cost of labour to the council for the year will be £97 10s. Mudgee Council, which claims that it is at present the highest rated municipality in the State, considers that it will have to put its rates up another 1d in the £ to meet the increases under the award. The council is effecting various retrenchments in its staff.

* * *

SATAN REBUKING SIN.

"Property Owner" writes to express his amusement at the action of the Water and Sewerage Board in calling upon the Meat Industry and Abattoirs Board to abate the nuisance arising from offensive smells emanating from the ventilating shafts of the sewer leading from the abattoirs at Homebush. He says:—

> To an inhabitant of Parramatta like myself this appears very much as though it were a case of Satan rebuking sin, or the impertinence and self-assertion of someone with his tongue in his cheek. This righteous Water Board obtained possession of the Parramatta sewerage system a few months ago, and from that time on conditions have become abominable around the septic tanks here. About three years ago these tanks were most offensive, and the engineer there, so I understand, invented some process for using the gases given off, and thus preventing the smell; but when the Water Board took over the system I find that they abolished the use of the engineer's invention, and we are now getting the result of their worse than useless meddling.

A SHIRE CLERK'S DEATH.

In a recent list of casualties appears the name of Lieutenant W. E. O'Halloran, who was killed in France. Lieutenant O'Halloran at the time of his enlistment was the shire clerk of Yallaroi Shire. He was previously town clerk of Picton. He is a brother of E. H. J. O'Halloran, the shire clerk of Gloucester, and formerly town clerk of Temora. Lieutenant O'Halloran was a young man still in the early twenties, who gave promise of rapid promotion in local government. He represents one among many great sacrifices that the local government world has given to the Empire.

IN MEMORIAM.

MAYHEW.—In sad but loving memory of our little daughter and sister, Millie Mayhew, who departed this life April 26, 1916.

Silently a mother's weeping,
Sadly droops a father's head,
Death has claimed their little darling,
Baby's numbered with the dead.

Inserted by her loving mother and father, brothers and sister, Walter, Percy, and Valerie.

MEREDITH.—In loving memory of my dear wife and loving mother, Adelaide, who departed this life April 26, 1916.

One of the best that God could send,
Beloved by all, a faithful friend;
Called home from those who deeply love,
To gain a glorious life above.
With aching hearts, with tearful eyes,
We linger where our dear one lies,
And breathe those sacred words once more,
Not lost, but only gone before.

Inserted by her loving husband and children, Adelaide and Amy.

MEREDITH.—In loving memory of my dear sister, Adelaide, who departed this life April 26, 1916 (suddenly), at Sutherland.

THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1917.

THE BRITISH ADVANCE.

It is evident from the statements of the War Office that the German officials have adapted to the needs of the present offensive the methods of description employed during the fighting on the Somme. The practice then was to mention all the assaults on an important position except the one that succeeded; to say nothing about the position until some days after its fall, and then to refer to it as an unimportant place within the allied lines. Such a plan would naturally be revived at a time when positions fall, either during the first impetus of an advance or in consequence of an enveloping movement without any frontal attack. The new method is to exaggerate the length of the front, so that without any definite misstatement or contradiction it will appear that the number of successes gained by the Allies have been counterbalanced by a greater number of failures. In the places mentioned the German report does not differ very widely from the British, for, though Lens was very far from the main battle-front, there was probably some fighting in the suburbs. The Germans mention the three places which were the British objectives; they agree that Guemappe was left in British hands; ignore the fall of Gavrelle, the first break in their new line; and say nothing about Roeux, of which the British hold the outskirts. The German report is undoubtedly open to the criticisms which the War Office direct against it. It produces an impression of failure on the part of the British, which does not correspond to the facts, and does not mention the failure of the German counter-attacks, and of the attempts to recapture Monchy. But the tone of the report, like its details, is merely an adaptation of old methods to changing circumstances. The Germans were formerly accustomed to describe the life of their soldiers in the field as a pleasant existence in which the heroic virtues were mingled with patronage of inferior peoples. Their object then was to counter-attack a growing impatience with the length of a war which they represented as consistently victorious. Their object now is to unite the whole people in support of the army by insisting on the bravery of the soldiers, on the unity of the nation and on its peril. The War Office may very reasonably see in this report a confirmation of the many accounts of discontent among the German workmen. The people of the most important industrial districts in Germany have pressed their demands for more bread by strikes, and by a demand for peace without any annexation. Hence the emphasis on the bravery of the German troops, which is incontestable, and on their needs for munitions as the prerequisite of a successful defence. The correspondent's account of the capture, loss, and final recapture of Guemappe by Scottish regiments leaves no doubt of the courage of the troops who contested it. They were evidently of very different calibre from the prisoners who surrendered so easily to Sir Douglas Haig on the French. They probably belonged to the thrusting troops who are distinguished by the Germans from their garrisons, and they represent every district in Germany, from the Alps to the sea, not merely to prove the unity of the Empire, but because it was necessary to pick the best men in order to make this method of defence successful.

The Germans complain of the British artillery as they did during the Somme battle, as if it were something unfair. They had all the advantage of superiority for two years, and were confident of success before their adversaries could be ready for them. Now they are realising for the first time the meaning of the war of nations which they themselves have challenged. In this battle the national effort of the Allies is matched against the mobilisation of the Central Powers. The industry and the inventive skill of the French and British are faced by the military output of the Germans, together with the superiority in positions which they gained during the first two months of war, and have been able to retain ever since. The progress of the British already recorded gives abundant reason for confidence in the final result, but nothing can be gained by anticipating a repetition of the sudden triumphs of the first phase of the battle. The conditions of the fighting forbid any hope of the surrender of great numbers of prisoners. The Germans are no longer defending cantonments in which whole garrisons might be cut off. Although they are still fighting for positions, they are nearly approaching the war of movement which a recent French critic predicted from the beginning of summer. On the other hand, there must be a considerable increase in the rate of British casualties. Great losses are always incurred when positions change hands more than once, and in this advance the British have faced an unprecedented number of machine-guns. The enemy has shown his sense of the importance of this battle by a great concentration of artillery, by the use of picked troops, and by the presence of many from the Eastern front. He is protecting the line which guards his centres of communication and is vital to his hold on the North of France. No doubt the immediate object of the battle is to gain time while the labour of prisoners of war may be used to build other lines still in front of the cities of Douai and Cambrai. The enemy plan is still to exhaust the Allies by the strength of his defences, to destroy their mobility by his submarines, and to force them to a compromise peace. It is consistent with this plan that combined naval and military forces may be used in an attack on one of the Russian ports—on Riga, or perhaps on Petrograd. The confidence professed by the German leaders has evidently been shaken by the continued attacks of the British and French on selected positions, and by their breaches in one line after another. They have shown that no line is invulnerable, and they have begun their advance so early in the year that they cannot be held up by the approach of winter as they were on the Somme. But accounts of this bitter fighting must convince us of the wisdom of the advice given a few weeks back both by Sir William Robertson and Sir Douglas Haig. There is only one way of defeating the Germans, namely, by a continuation of a series of attacks such as these by the British and French. The necessary condition of such a policy is that reinforcements are abundant, and that the supply of munitions is unceasing.

MR. CONROY AGAIN.

Mr. Conroy's rejoinder to our leader upon his candidature against Mr. Cook lays special emphasis upon the sins of the party with which the Prime Minister was identified before he was cast out. It is assumed, because Mr. Hughes was head of a Labour Government, that he and his colleagues must be held accountable for all that the caucus ordered; and consequently Mr. Cook is to be associated now with the extravagances and absurdities of a previous administration. He has sunk all differences for a present unity to win the war; but that is beside the mark. It counts for nothing. Mr. Conroy thus poses as an Abdiel, faithful alone among the faithless found. He rakes through political history to show how consistent he has been and how hopelessly inconsistent everybody must be that disagrees with him. But it was a wise American who advised his readers not to be consistent if they could be simply true. In the present case it is the truth that Mr. Hughes was not dominant in his party. He was not even strong enough when the crisis came to throw out the extremists and remain in control. He had been one among many when the caucus voted; but he and his colleagues had to decide between it and the Empire. The moment came when a vicious system of government had to be ended or mended. The war had altered the whole relation of Ministers to the Empire; and either they had to be real directors of the affairs of the country or prepare to be thrown out of a purely party machine. In the event the caucus was triumphant and Mr. Hughes and his loyalist colleagues had to leave the party to the extremists in it. It is still true, of course, that they had been willing to obey the orders of the caucus, for to that end were they elected, and for that purpose were they pledged. But the party platform could not hold moderate Labour men who recognised Australia's true defence as lying within the Empire and extremists who cared for nothing but the immediate triumphs of local parties. Mr. Cook and his supporters recognised that, whatever may have been the history of their opposition to Labour Governments in the past, the occasion called for a sinking of everything except the one issue. The war must be won, and with that single purpose it was possible to join forces with the moderate-minded but whole-hearted loyalists of the Labour party.

Mr. Conroy cannot place the war first. He is like the man in the fire at the old Victoria Theatre in Sydney many years ago who jettisoned a fine pier glass from one of the top windows and then carefully carried a feather bed in his arms downstairs. Mr. Conroy has thrown the war over the railings of our Federal politics and is now engaged in carrying the feather bed of the old party with which he has been identified carefully downstairs. He sees that the world is on fire, and he is anxious to save something. We believe that he is loyal to the Empire. But unfortunately the fire has driven him into the arms of those who have lost all perspective and sense of proportion, and who are accepting his help to delay the real salvage which is being attempted. His candidature against Mr. Cook is not only senseless, it is dastardly, in that it threatens the leadership of the only body that can keep Australia in true relation with the rest of the Empire. The party led by Mr. Tudor wants to destroy Mr. Hughes and Mr. Cook; and the disappearance of one or both will be hailed as a great victory. Mr. Cook's seat was not open to frontal attack, so Mr. Conroy's candidature has been accepted as a very convenient and helpful thing. He is receiving all the extremist support; and his arguments, which are exceedingly damaging against Mr. Tudor if they are convincing against Mr. Hughes, are taken as high explosives used for the right side. Nobody minds Mr. Conroy in the extremist ranks except as he can hurt those who support the Empire against all sectionalism. But the invasion of Mr. Cook's electorate is the more shameful because the quarrel really is with Mr. Hughes. Mr. Conroy adopts the extremist view and denounces the Prime Minister in unmeasured terms. Why, then, has he not been courageous enough to secure nomination for Bendigo? It would have been a three-cornered fight, no doubt, yet the Parramatta arguments would have fitted the situation to a nicety. But the recruiter of votes from both sides could see a pleasanter place in Parramatta; and as consistency is still his cry he is quite willing to break his old leader, as well as prejudice Australia in the eyes of the nation, in parading downstairs with the feather bed of a Liberalism that could be thrown into the street without damage at the present moment. The electors of Parramatta will surely take care that this intrusion is punished with votes cast in full strength for Mr. Cook on May 5.

[Written, after consultation, to express the views of the "Sydney Morning Herald," by C. Brunsdon Fletcher, 38 Hunter-street, Sydney.]

NEW ZEALAND COAL STRIKE.

The settlement of the coal strike in New Zealand is matter for congratulation, and we trust that the last has been heard of this ruthless spirit of opposition to constituted authority because of the war. Compromise and co-operation seem to have been accepted as imperative in the circumstances, and the strike delegates undertake to do their best to get the miners back to work at once. This is so far good. At the same time it has to be said that while New Zealand was engaged in sending troops to the front her coal miners were definitely taking sides with Germany. In no other way could the strike be interpreted. The miners may say that Germany had nothing to do with the case, in that they were opposed to the Government of New Zealand upon its methods of sending men to fight the common foe. But suppose that in France and Great Britain, and indeed in Russia to-day, the same argument were used. Germany would find the armies opposed to her disappearing like snow in the sunshine, and she could conquer the world at her leisure. New Zealand would inevitably come under her iron heel, and the coal miners would then be shot out of hand if they refused to hew the needful fuel for German battleships and cruisers. Men may convince themselves that the war does not matter: but unless Germany is decisively beaten, the British Empire will soon be a thing of the past. Thus we come to the position that those who refuse to help in defeating a common foe, or who act so that the enemy is assisted, are taking sides against their own country. They become actively disloyal. They are traitors and not patriots. The Government of New Zealand recognised this fact by its attitude to the strikers; and evidence is now forthcoming to show that a conspiracy was engineered to prevent the despatch of troops, and to paralyse all industry while holding up transports. Unionism used as in New Zealand becomes as much an instrument of war as the armies of Germany. Therefore the New Zealand Government dealt with this coal strike as an act of war, and it proceeded against the leaders as enemies of the State. Now that an end has been reached we may rejoice; but the lesson needs to be learned to the last letter that in this struggle with Germany those who are not with the Allies and the Empire are against them.

QUEENSLAND TEST CASE.

BRISBANE, Wednesday.

The historic case for the proposed abolition of the Legislative Council, and for an injunction in connection with the proposed referendum on the subject, came on for hearing again in the Supreme Court yesterday. Mr. Stumm stated the plaintiffs in the case really were the Legislative Council as a body, and the defendants were the same as in the other case, with the exception that the names of Mr. F. McDonnell and Mr. Jones were added. It would be convenient, perhaps, if his Honor directed that Messrs. McDonnell and Jones be defendants on behalf of the dissentient members, Messrs. Hamilton, Murphy, and Hinchcliffe.

The Attorney-General opposed the application for the reason, among others, that there was a lack of jurisdiction in the Court.

The Chief Justice made the order, and referred the motion to the Full Court.

The Full Court sat immediately afterwards.

COAL STRIKE ENDS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Wednesday.

The coal strike has been settled on the following terms:—It is to be made plain to the Military Service Boards that every essential workmen in the essential industries of coal and gold-mining should have their appeals allowed. The Government will not press for a penalty in the case of the men who have been arrested on account of the "go slow" policy, including anyone conveying messages to one union by direction of another union, in connection with the present strike. The Government will do its best to arrange for a conference between the coal mine owners and the employees. Within a fortnight every man is to go back to work as before the strike. The delegates undertake to do their best to induce the men to resume work immediately, and to abandon the "go slow" policy. If any prosecutions take place the Government will not press for penalties.

All the mines are working, except three, which will resume to-morrow.

WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Speaking at Wangaratta to-night, the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) repeated the explanation which he gave at Bridgewater on Monday of the difference between the numbers actually required to keep the Australian divisions up to strength and the estimate of the Army Council upon which the case for conscription had to some extent been based. The Australians at Pozieres had been cut up so that there were not enough reinforcements at hand to fill the gaps and to replace those who were too fatigued to fight on. The Australians had consequently been put into a place of comparative safety, so that their casualties had been practically negligible. That was the reason why British troops had taken the place of Australians.

BATHURST, Wednesday.

Senator Gardiner, formerly Assistant Minister for Defence, speaking in the Oddfellows' Hall last night, denied Mr. Hughes's statement that the Australian divisions had been withdrawn from the front through lack of reinforcements, and that the Australian troops had to be withdrawn for three months because of insufficient men to fill the gaps in the fighting at Pozieres. Mr. Hughes added that the Australians sustained such casualties that the reinforcements were inadequate to fill the gaps.

"I want to say here," said Senator Gardiner, "that this is the first opportunity I have had of contradicting that statement. I give it an emphatic denial."

THE HUN AS A FIGHTER.

Private George Ball, writing from England to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ball, of 200 York-street North, immediately prior to returning to France, having recovered from an attack of sciatica, says: "My candid opinion of the Hun as a fighter is that he is not up to much, and it is grand to see our lads in the trenches. We had the Prussian Guards against us at Moquet Farm last September, and it was there that I got the full strength of him as a fighter. Our boys, although fewer in number, were equal to the occasion, and not only took two lines of trenches in quick time from them, but hung on for 48 hours until relieved by the Canadians, who carried on the good work and knocked the Germans further back. The Prussians are a very big body of men, but they are by no means well built, and, from what I witnessed myself, are only too pleased to throw up their hands and say, 'Mercy, comrades.' Our boys don't do it, and never will."

GERMANS DEBARRED.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes), when speaking at Chewton last night, was asked whether, in the event of a British victory, Germans would be allowed to enter Australia. He replied: "That depends on the party that is returned at the election. If I am returned to office, Germans will certainly not be admitted."

SUPERPHOSPHATE CARGOES.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Colonel Oldershaw, of the Commonwealth Shipping Board, to-day outlined a proposal by which the Government will assist farmers in procuring an adequate supply of superphosphates. Five cargoes, of about 6000 tons each of phosphate rock, will be brought from Ocean Island to Australia, where it will be converted into superphosphates. These shipments will be utilised by farmers in Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia. The first vessel is expected to arrive early in July.

THE WHEAT POOL.

FARMERS AND THE ELECTIONS

The following appeal to the farmers in connection with the Federal elections is made by Mr. G. S. Beeby (Minister for Labour and Industry):—

I know that a great deal of discontent exists among the farmers of this State as to the administration of the wheat pool and that in some electorates this discontent is affecting support which should naturally go to the National Government in the Federal election. I have been brought into personal contact with a great number of cases of individual hardship, many of which, I believe, could have been avoided by more sympathetic administration and the inclusion of practical men on the various wheat boards.

The asset which the wheat pool deals with belongs to the farmers of Australia. But unfortunately in some directions the pool has been administered too much in the interests of shippers and agents. All these causes of complaint are, however, matters of detail, which can be remedied, and which I believe will be remedied now that the Government is beginning to understand better the handling of such a far-reaching and important undertaking as the co-operative control of the primary products of the Commonwealth.

The matter of most concern is whether the administrative mistakes may justify farmers voting for the Tudor party and its followers. Are these gentlemen likely to give any better results? The Tudor party stands for the imposition of further taxation on land used for primary production. It stands also for the extension of extreme industrial regulation to all primary industries. Not content with prescribing a reasonable minimum wage to all rural workers, it wants to impose on rural industries impossible codes of regulation as to working hours and rates of overtime; and, except in the shearing industry, is opposed to all contract work, and all methods of payment by results.

As against this the National party in both State and Federal politics urges that the whole course of legislation in the future shall be in the direction of encouraging in every possible way the increase of primary production. For these reasons I urge the farmers of Australia to support the National Government, and to rely on the growing change of outlook on country matters to remedy the many defects which are just grounds for complaint.

The issue involved in the Federal election is a matter of proper perspective; of understanding the relative importance of things. Should not farmers consider, first of all, what would their position have been if there had been no wheat pool?

With the persistent increase in freights and the growing difficulty in obtaining any form of transport to foreign markets he would have been long before this at the absolute mercy of wheat speculators. He would have held out for a time for a decent price, but as each month increased transport difficulties he would have been compelled to sell at whatever price speculators, who could wait for their returns, liked to pay. The wheat pool was a device to avoid these possibilities. The figures quoted by Mr. Hughes show that from the wheat pool, even as it has been administered, the farmers have up to the present obtained far better results than they would have obtained in the ordinary open competitive market. The figures quoted by Mr. Hughes, which may be accepted as absolutely reliable, are as follows:—The total quantity of wheat actually sold by the Government on behalf of the farmers equals 6,000,000 tons, at an average price of 4s 9d per bushel. Two million tons have been shipped, a little over 3,000,000 tons are still on hand, and the balance has gone into local consumption. On the wheat delivered the farmers have been paid over £27,000,000. On the wheat undelivered they have been paid nearly £14,000,000. Out of the total sales the quantity purchased by the British Government is about 3,500,000 tons, and although the bulk of this has not yet been delivered, largely owing to the submarine campaign, the farmers have been paid £14,000,000 on account.

There is no doubt, too, that by co-operative handling of all our wheat under Government supervision freight has been kept down. I believe that during the first few months of the pool farmers might have done a little better by selling to agents and allowing them to arrange freightage, but inside six months after the formation of the pool the freightage difficulty was beyond the control of private shippers, and without the pool the farmers would have been obtaining infinitely worse results. It is these big facts which the farmers must look to. They must realise that in all countries the greatest burden of the war has fallen on the primary producer. We are at war, and the worst results of the war have been felt by the wheatgrowers of Australia.

In spite of public opinion to the contrary the bulk of the wheat-farmers in this country are only strugglers. Here and there you will find a prosperous man who can stand the strain, but the backbone of the country, the average wheat farmer who struggles along with the assistance of his sons, is to-day in a precarious position. The actual cash which they have received for their crops since the outbreak of the war makes it very difficult for them to put a decent area under crop this year. The National Government, I believe, now understands the seriousness of the position, and with the awakened interest in rural problems can be relied on to vigorously remedy the mass of small grievances under which the farmers labour.

The matter of vital interest to farmers is the payment of balance owing for his crops. Negotiating for the balance of that payment depends upon the stability of the National Government, and it would be disastrous to transfer the management of our finances to a new Government, in which, say, King O'Malley might be Treasurer, and whose rural policy would be decided by the P.L.L. executive.

Every farmer who has his own and the interest of the country at heart should look at the wide issues involved, and, sinking all local and personal considerations declare for the National Federal Government.

EMPIRE PRESS UNION.

The annual meeting of the Australian section of the Empire Press Union was held yesterday, when the annual report and balance-sheet were received and adopted. Mr. J. O. Fairfax presided, and those present included Mr. W. J. Sowden, "Register," Adelaide; Messrs. C. H. Briggs and J. J. Knight, "Courier," Brisbane; Messrs. J. R. Carey and Watkin Wynne, "Daily Telegraph;" and Mr. G. H. Varley, "Daily Examiner."

The report contained reference to the opportunities afforded the Dominion's correspondents in England to visit the Grand Fleet, the great shipbuilding centres, and Woolwich Arsenal. It had also been arranged that the London correspondents of oversea journals should be invited to attend conferences between Cabinet Ministers and newspaper representatives.

Reference was also made to the satisfactory surplus shown by the Pacific Cable Board on its past year's work.

The Chairman drew attention to the report of the Dominion's Commission, recently issued, in which the opinion was expressed that the Press rates for cables were too high. The Commission recommends the acquisition by the Government of an Atlantic cable, and a connecting land line from Montreal to Nova Scotia, to connect with the Pacific cable.

The meeting expressed its satisfaction that the Press Congress proposed to be held in Australia in March of next year had, by arrangement, been postponed until 1919. The hope was expressed that the postponement would result in a more largely representative gathering than could be expected at the earlier date.

Sincere regret was expressed at the deaths of Mr. G. H. Wickham, the representative of the "West Australian," Perth; Mr. Christopher Bennett, managing proprietor of the "Evening News" and "Town and Country Journal;" and Mr. Gresley Lukin, an old and distinguished New Zealand journalist.

The following were elected deputy members of the London Council:—Sir Lauchlan Mackinnon, Mr. J. Randal Carey, Hon. Theodore Fink, and Mr. W. J. Sowden.

Mr. J. O. Fairfax was re-elected chairman of the Australian section for the ensuing year; Mr. J. Randal Carey, hon. treasurer; and Mr. C. T. Harris, hon. secretary; Mr. Thos. Pratt, F.C.P.A., was re-appointed hon. auditor.

The sum of £50 was voted, as a grant, in aid of the funds of the General Council in London.

RAILWAY WORKS.

Referring yesterday to the report that No. 4 tunnel on the eighth section of the North Coast railway had been left in such a condition as to be dangerous, the Minister for Works (Mr. Hall) stated that the responsible officer had reported that there was no danger. The Minister added that when Norton Griffiths and Co. were told to discontinue certain works they were definitely instructed to complete any work which it was necessary should be completed without delay. No tunnel or other work would be left in a dangerous condition. It was possible that a number of the men who had been discharged would be absorbed in other directions, as it was necessary to concentrate in certain directions. The effect of that would not be to increase the expenses, but to expedite the work.

MR. H. C. DANGAR.

DEATH IN SYDNEY.

The death of Mr. Henry Cary Dangar, M.L.C., took place early yesterday morning at his residence, Grantham, Potts Point, in his 87th year.

Australia has its great names—the names of men famous in its history—explorers, statesmen, pastoralists, captains of industry and commerce. And among these is the Dangar family. Mr. Henry Cary Dangar was born at Port Stephens on June 4, 1830. His father, Mr. Henry Dangar, who was descended from an old Huguenot family, and lived as a boy on a farm near St. Neots, Cornwall, came out to Australia in 1822, at the age of 23. A love of adventure lured him and five brothers to seek their fortunes in the then little known land beyond the seas—New Holland, as it was called. Mr. Henry Dangar was destined to play an important part as an Australian pioneer. For six years he was occupied in survey work in the Hunter River district; and in 1826 he acquired an area of 700 acres, which was the nucleus of the afterwards well-known Neotsfield estate, on which his eldest son, Mr. W. J. Dangar, resided in later days. He laid out the original plan of Newcastle, or Kingstown, as it was then called. From 1830 till 1832 he had his home at Port Stephens, and was associated with the Australian Agricultural Company, in conjunction with the well-known Arctic explorer, Sir Edward Parry, who was the general manager of the company. Then, in 1832, Mr. Dangar packed his belongings in a boat, went up the Hunter, and settled at Neotsfield—so called after his old Cornwall home—and thenceforward engaged in pastoral pursuits, paying much attention to the improvement of stock. He was also one of the first to test the tinning of meat as a profitable industry in this country, and for this purpose he established a factory at Newcastle. For some years he sat in the old Legislative Council, but politics never attracted him greatly. He died in 1861, leaving a widow, five sons, and two daughters.

Such was the beginning of the pioneering life of this honoured Australian family. It was at Port Stephens that Henry Cary Dangar was born in 1830. Mr. Dangar was for years one of our best-known and most respected public men—he sat in the Parliament of New South Wales for over 40 years—as he has also been one of our most prominent pastoralists. His life was a full one and a busy one; and in the 86 years spent in this country he saw many wonderful changes. Few men had a richer store of reminiscences.

Going to England as a youth, Mr Dangar completed his studies at Trinity College, Cambridge, and there he took his M.A. degree. He entered the Middle Temple, and in 1854 was called to the Bar. But having made himself acquainted with law, he was satisfied to let it rest there. He used to tell his friends that the only person he ever defended was hanged; but Mr. Dangar loved a joke. He has a son, Mr. R. N. Dangar, practising law in Sydney at the present time. But for himself, the call of the free, wide spaces was too insistent to be ignored, and, returning to New South Wales, he followed the pastoral pursuits which his father had begun. He went on from success to success; and the State owes much to him, particularly as a horse-breeder. In other days than these—before the automobile came—the Dangar horses were the envy of all who drove in carriages. The Dangar horses were picked out at the shows; and on the turf, too, they were well known.

For nearly half a century Mr. H. C. Dangar had been prominently identified with turf affairs in this State as a breeder and owner of racehorses. For over 47 years he had been a member of the committee of the Australian Jockey Club, and for a long time was chairman of it. He saw the A.J.C. grow from a very small beginning to the proud position it now occupies—the wealthiest and best-equipped racing institution in Australasia. When he resigned as a member of the committee in February of this year a special resolution was carried placing on record his long and valuable services to the club. One of the best horses that carried his popular black jacket, orange sleeves and cap, was Gibraltar, who credited him with the A.J.C. Second Foal Stakes and Derby in 1890, and the V.R.C. St. Leger Stakes in 1891. Mr. Dangar inherited the famous Neotsfield Stud from his brother, Mr. W. J. Dangar, and subsequently presented that property to his son, Mr. R. H. Dangar. Gibraltar was one of the last good horses he bred there before handing the place to his son, but before doing so he imported Positano for the St. Simon strain, and before sending him to the stud he raced him. In Mr. Dangar's colours Positano won several good races, including the A.J.C. Spring Stakes. Another good but unlucky horse raced by him was Leonidas, and Attalus won in his colours. During his ownership of Neotsfield Mr. Dangar bred a Derby winner in Bob Ray, who was sold as a yearling for 35 guineas.

All other healthy forms of sport also claimed Mr. Dangar's interest—notably yachting. He was for a considerable time Commodore of the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron, and his name is associated with the Peri and the Mistral—the redoubtable Mistral that finally struck her colours to the Magic. In ocean races, the chief event in which the late Mr. Dangar took a part was the race to Newcastle and back, between the schooner Chance and the cutter Xarifa, Mr. Dangar representing the owner of the Chance on the Xarifa, which was owned by Mr. Charles Parbury.

The late Mr. Dangar took a very keen interest in rifle-shooting. He was one of the founders, and for many years an active member, of the National Rifle Association of New South Wales. He was a member of the first committee, which was formed in 1860, and continued to hold this office until 1870. From 1866 to 1868 he was honorary secretary, from 1870 to 1877 he was vice-president, and from 1877 to 1909 he was a trustee. A bronze shield was competed for from 1861 to 1867 between New South Wales and Victoria, and Mr. Dangar was one of the winning team in the latter year. In 1876, when a team of New South Wales riflemen was sent to Philadelphia to compete in the international contest, Mr. Dangar generously made up the deficiency in the public subscriptions for the purpose—a matter of about £800. Many other public movements were indebted to him for generous support. It is not without interest to note that the cloisters at St. Paul's College, in the grounds of the Sydney University, were built at his expense, in memory of his old college days.

In the field of politics, as already stated, Mr. Dangar served the State for a very long time. Originally elected to the Legislative Assembly in 1874 as member for West Sydney, he was elected member for East Sydney in 1880; and three years later he was appointed to the Legislative Council. For 30 years he was one of the most regular and zealous attendants at the House; and as a vigorous debater his remarks were at all times listened to with interest and attention. Of late failing health had interfered with his attendance.

In 1865 Mr. Dangar married Miss Lucy Lamb, daughter of Commander Lamb, R.N. His wife and a daughter (Mabel) predeceased him, but a large family remains—four sons and six daughters. The sons are Mr. Richard Halifax Dangar, of Neotsfield, Mr. Reginald Neville Dangar, of Sydney, Colonel Horace William Dangar, a member of the Military Board in Melbourne, and Mr. Leonard Adrian Dangar, of Warialda. The daughters are Mrs. H. M. Osborne (formerly of Moss Vale, and now of Queensland), Mrs. Lewin (wife of Captain C. Le C. Lewin, R.N., Mrs. Dangar, wife of Major G. C. Dangar, M.C. (formerly of the 13th Hussars, and now serving with the Australian Imperial Forces in Egypt), and the Misses Elinor, Muriel, and Dorothy Dangar.

The funeral will take place this morning, leaving Grantham for the Waverley Cemetery at 11 o'clock.

SICK AND WOUNDED.

Sick and wounded will arrive overland from Melbourne on Friday next at 8.30 a.m.

Red Cross cars numbered 305-330 inclusive are requested to be in attendance at the racehorse platform, Chalmers-street entrance, Central Railway Station, at the above time.

Relations to the number of two for each soldier will be allowed on to the platform on showing their letter from the military notifying them of the expected arrival of the soldier.

New South Wales men will be medically examined en route from Melbourne, and those fit to go home will be given leave at the station, instead of proceeding to the Anzac Buffet. Queenslanders will be driven to Rose Hall, whence, after having dinner, they will be given leave for the afternoon, and will leave by the 6.50 p.m. train the same night.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

A contingent of 173 Australian soldiers, who had been wounded in France, disembarked at Port Melbourne to-day. The party was made up of 48 Victorians, 60 New South Welshmen, 25 Queenslanders, 37 South Australians, and 3 Tasmanians. In addition to the Australians, 40 French soldiers also disembarked.

OVERSEA MAILS.

Letter and packet mails for the expeditionary forces abroad close at the G.P.O. at 11 a.m. on Monday, and mails for Japan and China at 4.30 p.m. on the same day.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

THE OLD LABOUR VOTE.

It would appear to be undeniable that the result of the Federal elections will depend upon the disposition of the old Labour vote. Upon this vote, therefore, there is a special responsibility. What reasons are there for asking men and women who voted Labour in 1914 not to vote P.L.L. on this occasion?

* * *

That question brings us at once to the very cause of the election. The people of New South Wales have now had their attention distracted from the real business of the prosecution of the war by both a State and a Federal election campaign. Why? Just because a big change has come over the P.L.L. There would have been no State election but for the imminence of a Federal fight. Of course the proposition that the P.L.L. is a very different organisation to what it was in 1914 is being vigorously denied. But by whom? By a set of men who, for the most part, were little heard of, even in inner P.L.L. circles, in 1914.

* * *

Practically all the men who led the Labour party to victory in 1914 agree to the proposition. Those who deny it are, for the most part, men without records in the democratic evolution of Australian politics. In 1914, Mr. J. C. Watson had a reputation in the Labour movement which might well be the envy of any politician in any part of the world. There is no need to dilate on his record. What does he say:—"The attitude now assumed by the P.L.L. organisation towards the Parliamentary representatives is absolutely opposed to democratic government." Then Mr. Watson adds, in a message to the old Labour vote: "The question at issue in this election is not the desirability or otherwise of the Labour platform, but whether the electors will retain power in their own hands, or hand it over to an irresponsible oligarchy, temporarily controlling the official Labour movement."

* * *

Does anybody imagine that Mr. J. C. Watson finds any pleasure in saying things like this about the movement in the building up of which he spent the whole of a fairly vigorous lifetime? Mr. Watson's message may be taken as typical of the opinions of all the other Labour-Nationalists who are before the people to-day—Holman, Hughes, Spence, Pearce, Givens, Guthrie, and many others. All these men, every one of them, according to the P.L.L. to-day, have suddenly abandoned all the earnest convictions of a lifetime, and gone over to the ranks of the inherent enemy of the working classes. What a mean, shabby view of human nature of their own leaders of the past the P.L.L. extremists show.

* * *

"Don't take any notice of the papers," said one of the P.L.L. speakers to his audience the other night. "They always were opposed to you," he went on, "and they have only taken up Hughes and Holman and the others now because they have turned traitors." That may be first-class electioneering tactics from the P.L.L. point of view, but it happens to be a lie. It is to the publicity given to the Labour movement by the Press that it owed the powerful position it was in prior to the abandonment of its most cherished principles by the little clique of extremists which has now got control.

* * *

The old Labour party boasted of the freedom of its advocates. They were tied to no section of the community, they said. They demanded freedom of speech, and denounced any and all alliances with bodies outside of Parliament. Yet this is exactly the position of the P.L.L. to-day. Control of the movement was secured by a packed conference. Every important decision of that conference was fixed up before delegates met in the conference hall to vote on the question at issue. This has been candidly admitted. More, it has been stated that the next conference will be similarly packed. A few large unions have control, and they are determined to keep control. All this was done in the name of the Labour party. It was engineered and carried out by men who had no claims to be considered Labour leaders.

* * *

Take the position of the president of the P.L.L. Never in his wildest dreams did Mr. Doyle ever contemplate occupying that position before the last conference. There, he was chosen by the "industrial" section for the post, on the same understanding as that entered into by all the others. His position is held on the sufferance of the "industrialists," to whom alone he is responsible. Furthermore, Mr. Doyle and his fellow members of the executive were elected on the vote of about 120 delegates, who were absolutely unanimous in the view that members of Parliament should not sit on that body, which was the supreme court of the Labour movement, and the absolute master of members of Parliament belonging to the Labour party. Mr. Hughes's name was cheered to the echo at this conference. Senator Pearce, as Acting Prime Minister and Minister for Defence, was given the heartiest of receptions. Mr. Holman was the only member of the State Parliament out of many who were nominated to succeed in getting elected to the executive. Six months afterwards the names of these leaders were being howled to derision, while Mr. Doyle and his confreres were carving up between them the safe Labour seats, which they had never done anything to win. And to-day we see half-a-dozen of these men serenely occupying seats in Parliament which were veritable gifts to them, because of the work put in during past years by the men they expelled with so much disinterested enthusiasm.

* * *

And in spite of this absolute revolution in the policy and the methods of the P.L.L. it is being persisted in to-day that there has been no change, that the only people who have changed are those who have been kicked out. But the result of the State elections showed that this view was not general. Construe that result as anyone may, there can be only one conclusion, and that is that a very large portion of the old Labour vote has revolted against these outrages alike of political responsibility and democratic principle.

* * *

All over New South Wales to-day there are men and women who voted Labour more often and worked for Labour a great deal harder than any single member of that original "industrial" executive which rent the movement in twain. Theirs are the more bitter regrets that the movement to which they devoted their lives should be blasted by a set of irresponsibles, for the most part young men who had never been called upon to sacrifice anything for their political convictions, but who, on the contrary, had been enjoying paid positions, the gifts of the component parts of the organisation. It is to these men and women that the appeal goes out to-day to do something to stop the rot. There is only one way to restore honest government and adherence to the principles of democracy, and that is to beat the P.L.L. These men have no right to call themselves the Labour party. They are not. They merely live in the empty house from which the Labour party has removed to the higher plane of national politics, national honour, and national security.

* * *

"Don't imagine that Mr. Brookfield is a rara avis," said Mr. Bruce Smith at Haberfield on Tuesday night. "There are hundreds of them in the P.L.L." A few weeks ago there were quite a number of people who were prepared to believe that the denunciation of the I.W.W. (which necessarily meant the denunciation of Mr. Brookfield) on the part of the P.L.L. was comparatively genuine. But they have waited in vain for any demonstration of that genuineness. The P.L.L. asked Mr. Brookfield to resign. Mr. Brookfield did not resign—and that is as far as we have got. One would imagine that the P.L.L. knew of no other way of getting rid of objectionable people than by asking them to resign. Did somebody suggest expulsion? But that might offend all Mr. Brookfield's friends and co-thinkers in the movement, and if the P.L.L. starts that business, after the recent denunciation of its ranks, it might soon find itself with only an executive left, and nobody left even to expel.

* * *

It is very difficult to follow Mr. Conroy through his lengthy panegyric on himself and his political career. But the one thing Mr. Conroy fails to explain is why he is carrying the P.L.L. banner in Parramatta against his old chief, and why he finds it necessary to boom the three P.L.L. Senate candidates at every opportunity. Does he really wish the farmers and others, about whose affairs he talks so much to believe that their interests will be safer in the hands of a Federal P.L.L. Government than in those of the consolidated National party? The answer to that question need only take two lines, and would clear up quite a lot of mystery about Mr. Conroy's candidature for Parramatta.

LABOUR MEMBER RESIGNS.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Reports were current in Maryborough, Vic., to-day that Mr. Outtrim, who has been a representative for Maryborough in the Legislative Assembly in the Labour interest for many years, has decided to resign from the party.

VERY VIOLENT FIGHTING.

EAST OF ARRAS.

CLASH ON HINDENBURG LINE.

LONDON, April 25.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his midday report of Tuesday, says:—

Severe fighting was continued on Monday evening and night along the whole front east of Arras from Croiselles to northward of Gavrelle. The enemy made constantly repeated but unsuccessful counter-attacks. The Germans were determined to hold on regardless of losses. We maintained the positions gained on Monday.

We made further progress east of Monchy-le-Preux, and also in the neighbourhood of Roeux. We successfully beat off a violent counter-attack at Gavrelle.

We gained ground during the night along a wide front east of Epehy. We reached the St. Quentin Canal (which flows between Cambrai and St. Quentin) in the neighbourhood of Vendhuile. We captured the villages of Villers-Plouich and Beaucamp, further north.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his midnight report of Tuesday, says: Further information regarding Monday's battle shows that the fighting was exceptionally fierce. Seven German divisions were engaged on the Croisilles-Gavrelle front. Several points of tactical importance changed hands more than once. All remained ours, except a few buildings north of Roeux.

Our massed artillery shattered frequent counter-attacks, while those who penetrated our barrages were cut down by rifle and machine-gun fire. One British corps took prisoners belonging to four divisions. We advanced on the whole front.

There has been considerable fighting to-day, though it was somewhat less fierce. At a number of points on the battle-front our progress was continued. Between the Sensee River and the Monchy-le-Preux line we advanced to within a few hundred yards of Fontaine-le-Croisille and Cherisy.

A counter-attack by strong enemy forces in the neighbourhood of Gavrelle this afternoon was broken up by our artillery and driven back in disorder.

Over 2000 prisoners have been passed to the rear since Monday morning. Others have not yet been counted.

THE WAY TO DOUAI.

The Paris newspaper "Petit Parisien" says the British semi-circle around Lens was drawn closer yesterday, the British holding the majority of the suburbs. The enemy concentrated important forces east of Arras, determined at all costs to bar the way to Douai.

HEAVY FIRE ON BELGIAN FRONT.

A Belgian communique says: Very heavy artillery fire prevails on our front.

THE FRENCH FRONT.

A French communique issued at noon on Tuesday says:—

Our artillery beat down some enemy batteries in the regions of St. Quentin and the Oise.

Two German reconnaissances, in endeavouring to reach our lines in the direction of Hancourt, were repulsed, with heavy losses.

A violent artillery struggle is in progress in the regions of Hurtebise, Foulon Valley, and Craonne, on the Aisne front.

Minor actions have taken place, enabling us to advance and improve our positions on the plateau of Chemins-des-Dames and in the direction of Juvincourt, where we carried a German post.

We successfully bombarded the enemy's lines of communication in the Champagne.

A French communique issued at midnight on Tuesday stated: The day was chiefly marked by artillery actions on the whole front. We continued a destructive fire against enemy batteries and organisations in the regions of St. Quentin, the Oise, Cerbeny, and Juvincourt, and in the Champagne. Explosions were observed in a certain number of batteries. We brought back four 105-millimetres mortars captured during the fighting on the Plateau Chemin-des-Dames, hitherto not counted in our gains.

Near Moronvilliers our light troops penetrated German trenches, which were found full of corpses.

UNUSUAL GERMAN REPORT.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

A German wireless message on Tuesday stated: On the Arras battlefield, British troops standing on French territory yesterday delivered the second great thrust to break through the German lines. It is the heaviest of battles. For days the enemy has been hurling masses of shells of every description against our positions.

Early on the morning of the 23rd the artillery battle increased to very strong gunfire. Soon afterwards English thrusting troops, led often by tanks, burst forward on a 30-kilometre front behind this wall of fire. Our destructive fire forced them in many places to withdraw with heavy losses. At other points the battle sways backwards and forwards with great bitterness.

Whenever the enemy gained ground our brave, eager infantry drove him back. The suburbs of Lens and the villages of Avion, Gavrelle, Roeux, and Guemappe were the hottest places in this fierce struggle. Their names will be associated with deeds of heroism by regiments from almost every German district between the sea and the Alps.

A further attack of particular intensity, with new masses, followed in the evening on both sides of the Scarpe. The strength of this attack also broke under our fire and hand-to-hand fighting.

The enemy gained a few hundred yards on the Cambrai-Arras Road. The ruins of Guemappe remained in his hands. The German soldier at the front knows that every man and woman at home is working unceasingly to support him in a life and death struggle.

A German official message on Tuesday evening stated: There has been fighting all day for Gavrelle. New British attacks were made along the Arras-Cambrai Road.

ENEMY DISCOMFITURE.

The British War Office, referring to the German communique issued on Tuesday afternoon, points out that no attack was made on Lens, Avion, or Oppy. The attack, the War Office says, covered a front of 14, not 30 kilometres, and yielded us Gavrelle, Guemappe, and the outskirts of Roeux. These villages alone formed our objectives.

The Germans emphasise our heavy bombardments. True, we rely greatly upon our artillery to destroy defences, reduce our losses, and inflict heavy casualties. Repeated counter-attacks by the enemy were repulsed with very heavy losses. Our casualties have been moderate.

A desperate endeavour is finally made to hide the enemy's discomfiture. The whole document is the most encouraging indication yet furnished of the state of mind of the German army and people, and the anxiety with which the German headquarters regard the situation.

REARGUARD ACTIONS ENDED.

FIGHT FOR HINDENBURG LINE

Mr. Philip Gibbs, writing from British headquarters in France on Tuesday night, says:—

The Hindenburg line is not a German myth. It is a very real thing, running through Drocourt and Queant. Its defences are not yet finished. The pioneer battalions which are following the armies of forced labour, including French civilians and Russian prisoners, are working day and night upon trenches and gun emplacements. The German General Staff has ordered the Germans to hold their present forward positions to the death, to enable the completion of the line.

Fresh troops were rushed up on Monday to relieve the battalions which had already been broken in the British attacks. These reinforcements in some cases flung back our line and regained the ground we had won. Though large numbers of Germans were killed, other waves came on. They were also mown down.

After the Scotchmen took Guemappe, enemy reinforcements retook it. In the evening a second Scottish attack recaptured it, and many Germans were made prisoners.

The Germans are also fighting desperately to regain the key position, Monchy.

Our airmen discovered 4000 Germans in Sart Wood (north-east of Monchy), preparing for an attack. British batteries filled the wood with gas-shells. The German casualties were horrible.

The Germans are fighting with better spirit than in the Vimy battle. No doubt this is because fresh troops have only just been flung into the fighting line.

On a balance of the fortunes of war, the second phase of the battle of Arras is in our favour. Many prisoners have been taken, and our losses are much lighter than those of the Germans.

We are now confronted with the main German armies, and are no longer fighting rearguard actions. The Germans are standing up to the battle and are striking back hard.

IMPORTANCE OF CAPTURES.

Correspondents at British headquarters in France say that St. George's Day witnessed terrific fighting. Many troops wore red and white favours in honour of the anniversary.

The centres of the struggle were at Gavrelle and Guemappe. Both were retaken by the Germans but both are finally ours. Gavrelle is important, because it forms the southern end of the famous trench line running north through Oppy.

Until Guemappe was taken progress between the rivers Cojeul and Sensee was impossible.

The German prisoners state that they had to win back the ground or retire behind the Drocourt-Queant line.

The fact that a number of "pockets" of Germans, whose lairs had been overrun, fired upon our troops from behind, complicated the battle.

ENEMY AVIATORS BEATEN.

40 DOWNED IN ONE DAY.

British airmen had a record day on Monday. Forty German machines were brought down. Fifteen were seen to crash to the earth. Only two British machines were lost.

Sir Douglas Haig reported on Tuesday:—

A greater amount of air fighting occurred on Monday than on any one previous day. Our aeroplanes attacked enemy machines wherever they were found, going far behind the enemy lines, bombing railways, dumps, aerodromes, and compelling the enemy to give battle. Fifteen German machines were destroyed, and 24 driven down. A large three-seater machine was brought down in our lines, and the occupants taken prisoners. Two of our machines are missing.

THE CHANNEL FIGHT

There were pathetic scenes at Dover at the funeral of the British and German sailors killed in the Channel fight on Friday night. An old market hall was converted into a mortuary. A vast crowd stood bareheaded as bluejackets placed the coffins on Army Service waggons under a mass of magnificent wreaths.

The funeral of 28 Germans took place earlier in the day. Bluejackets draped the German coffins with the German ensign, and a small party of rescued officers and seamen followed the coffins, under an armed military escort. A single wreath, inscribed "A tribute to a brave enemy" came from the Vice-Admiral of the Dover patrol.

CANADA'S HUGE WAR BILL.

The Canadian Budget shows that the war expenditure to date is £120,000,000. The Canadian national debt is now £180,000,000, and at the close of the current fiscal year it will probably be £260,000,000. Heavy increases in the taxation on war profits are announced.

WAR CONFERENCE.

The night sessions of the Imperial Conference have begun. The members hope that they will be able to complete their work within a week or ten days.

ARGENTINE WHEAT EMBARGO

WASHINGTON, April 24.

A diplomatic settlement has been arranged with Britain in respect to the embargo imposed by Argentine on the export of wheat.

AMERICA ARGUES CONSCRIPTION.

GREAT EXCHANGE OF MISSIONS.

NEW YORK, April 24.

While recruiting is slow, vigorous opposition to conscription has developed in both Houses.

The Speaker, Mr. Champ Clark, vehemently opposed the bill.

Senator Thomas urged that they should follow the British example and give voluntaryism a trial.

Senator Gallinger complained that Mr. Roosevelt's offer to raise a volunteer brigade had been refused by the Government.

Lieutenant-General Bridges, a member of the British mission, says:—Conscription is vital to the United States before the nation can have any success in the war. The volunteer system in England retarded and delayed every phase of war development. Voluntaryism sent trained artisans and industrials into the trenches when they were badly needed at home, and left at home those needed at the front. Conscription at the beginning of the war would have obviated difficulties regarding munitions and many other vital mistakes.

It was the duty of the Allies, continued General Bridges, now to speed up the war. The British people had been won entirely to conscription. They were fanatical even upon the subject. They opposed it only because they did not know what it meant, but now they looked on conscription as a business way of making war. Lord Kitchener's volunteer recruiting was the innocent cause of retarding Britain's war progress, because without Lord Kitchener the breakdown of voluntaryism would have come earlier, and conscription would have been earlier introduced. Lord Kitchener's very success had supported voluntaryism for a long time.

A war commission from Italy is expected to arrive soon in the United States.

The personnel of the United States Commission which is going to Russia will probably be:—Senator Elihu Root (ex-Secretary of State), Mr. Charles R. Crane (a prominent manufacturer and banker, who was offered, before the war, the appointment of Ambassador to Russia), Professor Harpur (of Chicago University), and Mr. Theodore Roosevelt (ex-President).

United States Steel earned during the quarter £22,600,000. It will subscribe £1,000,000 to the war loan.

The United States will grant a loan to the British of £20,000,000 immediately, out of £25,000,000 just raised on certificates of indebtedness.

The Government is considering the making of financial advances to Italy and Russia

FRENCH MISSION ARRIVES.

A Washington despatch announces the arrival of Marshal Joffre and the French Minister for Justice, M. Viviani (heads of the French mission which has gone to the United States to consult with the U.S.A. Government and the British which is already there).

The French Mission arrived in an auxiliary cruiser at Hampton Roads. It will drive through the streets of Washington. M. Viviani will see the President to-day. The commission is prepared to discuss the matter of an expeditionary force for Europe.

M. Viviani said: We greet with great emotion the first democracy in the world, with which France shares her ideals.

The people of Washington are preparing a most cordial reception for the French mission on Wednesday. The cruiser on which the Frenchmen came was met by American destroyers.

A member of the Commission says their purpose is to extend the principle of the Allies' conferences, which have been held in various capitals, to America. The conference will consider military, economic, and financial questions.

The French Cabinet had such confidence in M. Viviani that it gave him no written instructions. Marshal Joffre is prepared to explain the exact military situation, and, presumably, to indicate in what direction America can best help in a military sense.

A correspondent of the "New York World" accompanied the French mission. He says that Marshal Joffre favours an expeditionary force. The officials of the party included experts in marine transport problems. Marshal Joffre said that the Poilus wear the stars and stripes in the trenches.

The New York newspapers are most enthusiastic in their welcome to the Frenchmen. The "Herald" says the reunion will not be complete till an American contingent is in France.

WHEAT FOR BRITAIN.

HOME PRODUCTION.

In the House of Commons on Monday Mr. R. E. Prothero (President of the Board of Agriculture), when moving the second reading of the Corn Production Bill (designed to stimulate agriculture), emphasised the necessity for greater independence against foreign supplies. They must make rural life more attractive and more prosperous. The bill was national, and not a farmers' measure. If Britain produced 82 per cent. of her requirements for five years the remainder could be made up by storage and economies. In order to obtain this result it would be necessary to increase the arable land from 19,000,000 to 27,000,000 acres. A further 250,000 men were required on the land. Britain had a further 330,000 acres under corn and potatoes this year, and Ireland 700,000.

Mr. Runciman complained that the measure was controversial. It was intended to lay the permanent foundation of an agricultural policy.

The debate on the Corn Production Bill showed that there was strong Liberal opposition to the proposal to guarantee minimum prices to the farmer. The Nationalists supported the Government.

Mr. Runciman said that the national security would be better achieved by storing wheat in national granaries, holding enough for three years' consumption.

SMALLER RATIONS FOR TROOPS

It is reported that the authorities are reducing the bread ration in the army owing to the shortage of wheat and flour. The meat ration in the army will be correspondingly increased. The stocks of meat have recently been raised owing to the killing of cattle to save feeding, and by the system of meatless days.

THE CZARINA IN POLITICS.

INFLUENCE WITH CZAR.

LONDON, April 25.

A Moscow newspaper has published private telegrams which passed between the Czarina and the Czar in December and March, while the Czar was at the front. All the telegrams are in English, and show that the Czarina was active in her interference in politics.

One message asked the Czar to immediately stop the prosecution of Manouiloff, Baron Sturmer's private secretary, who was accused of blackmail. The telegram ended: "This is absolutely necessary for your peace of mind." The Czar replied: "I will stop the case at once." The Czarina telegraphed: "Thank you so much for your noble order of yesterday."

Telegraphing on March 12, the Czarina said: "Yesterday's riots are shocking. Many of the troops have gone over." Later in the day she telegraphed: "The strikes are spreading, and the troops are joining the strikers; some concessions are unavoidable."

An astounding letter by the Czarina to the notorious monk Rasputin, written in ungrammatical Russian, says: "What joy that you came to see us, to lay one's head on your shoulder and say nothing, just to feel the joy of peace and forgetfulness. What heavenly bliss! I thank you for giving it to me. Forgive me all my imperfections. I want to be a good Christian, but it is difficult to conquer one's bad habits. Don't leave me. I am weak. I love you, and have faith in you alone." It was signed "Your daughter."

The Czarina's grief at Rasputin's murder is reflected in a number of the telegrams.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "New York World" says that a mob, led by a pro-German Socialist, who said America was the enemy of socialism, threatened the American Embassy. Soldiers dispersed the crowd.

German agents circulated a report among the Russian soldiers that land was being distributed, thus causing a number to leave the front. M. Gutchoff, Minister for War, issued a denial, reassuring the soldiers.

[Speaking in the Duma last November, M. Miliukoff (now Foreign Minister in the Provisional Government) exposed the pro-German plottings of the then Premier, Baron Sturmer, and caused the downfall of that traitor's Ministry and a temporary set-back to the "dark forces" of pro-Germanism in Russian politics. In the course of his speech, M. Miliukoff denounced the scandal connected with Manasevitch Manouiloff, Sturmer's private secretary. This person was arrested on a charge of accepting bribes, and, when brought before the magistrate, he made a statement which implicated other persons high in the nation's administration. The Premier, learning of this man's arrest, was furious, and those who had caused the arrest were expelled from office. Then he set to work to secure Manouiloff's release, and the cablegram shows how it was done. The Minister for Justice resigned as a protest against this intrigue. M. Miliukoff went on to say that, in his earlier days, Manouiloff was in the Russian secret police in Paris, and he furnished the Russian newspapers with piquant details of the lives of Russian revolutionaries. Later he was engaged by the German Ambassador in Russia, Count of Pourtales, to buy over the great Russian newspaper, the "Novoye Vremya," to the German cause. He tried, but was chased ignominously out of the newspaper office.]

SUBMARINE MENACE.

"GREATER THAN EVER."

Mr. Kennedy Jones (Director-General of the Food Economy Department) declares that the submarine menace is greater than ever, and unless people further reduce the consumption of breadstuffs, they may be brought to the edge of disaster before the harvest.

Lord Devonport (Food Controller) states that the latest estimate of Canada's exportable wheat is much below the reported 81,000,000 bushels. He denies that the British Government has sold any wheat held in America.

SPANISH NOTE.

The German newspaper "Cologne Gazette" says that Spain's Note to Germany emphatically repeats the demand that Spanish lives and ships shall be respected.

ENEMY DESTROYERS.

ATTACKED BY AIRMEN.

The British Admiralty reports:—Three British naval aeroplanes attacked five destroyers steaming between Blankenburge and Zeebrugge on Monday afternoon. The leading machine dropped sixteen bombs, one obtaining a direct hit. The remaining destroyers scattered, attacked by two machines, which dropped thirty-two bombs. Afterwards the leading destroyer listed to port, and was probably sunk, as only four destroyers were afterwards seen entering Zeebrugge.

GERMANY'S PLANS.

The Amsterdam correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" declares that the socialist paper "Vorwaerts," in an article, insists that Germany must strive towards a lasting peace by abandoning all idea of annexations and indemnities. It is worthy of note that the German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, often uses "Vorwaerts" to forward his ideas. Therefore, it is possible that this article indicates, even if vaguely, that Germany is inclined to climb down further.

The German National Liberal papers protest against a peace programme of no annexations and no indemnities. The "Kolnische Zeitung" says that peace without victory would be senseless.

A Zurich message says that the German Government warned the strikers in Berlin, Spandau, Leipzig, Chemnitz, Stettin, Hamburg, Bremen, Kiel, and Essen, and in the industrial districts of the Rhine and Westphalia, that they would be sent to the front unless they returned to work by the 23rd inst. The military have assumed control of the factories.

LOSS OF BRITISH AIRSHIP

It is stated in Rotterdam that two German aeroplanes 20 miles north of Zeebrugge brought down the British airship, with eight men in its car, which was recently reported to have been lost in the Channel

SWEDISH QUEEN AND THE GERMANS.

An Amsterdam message announces that the Queen of Sweden (who, before her marriage in 1881, was Princess Victoria of Baden) has telegraphed the Burgomaster of Freiburg her sorrow in connection with the recent air raid by the Allies.

ADVANCE NORTH OF BAGDAD.

RAILWAY PROPERTY SEIZED.

LONDON, April 25.

General Maude (who is in charge of the British forces in Mesopotamia) reports:—The battle on the right bank of the Tigris, between Samara and Istabulat (about 60 miles north of Bagdad) was continued on the night of the 22nd instant. There was severe hand-to-hand fighting, and numerous enemy counter-attacks. We drove out the enemy, who stubbornly defended the position, which was elaborately prepared with iron-roofed dugouts.

We pursued the enemy and occupied Samara station (70 miles north-east by north of Bagdad) on the 22nd inst. The enemy hastily destroyed everything possible.

Our captures include 16 locomotives, 224 railway trucks, and two munition barges. The enemy's casualties on the 21st and 22nd inst. were heavy.

[The British, advancing up the Tigris beyond Bagdad, are also now advancing along the German-built Constantinople-Bagdad railway, of which so much has been heard. At least 1200 miles out of the total of 1500 miles have been constructed; and the 70-mile section between Samara and Bagdad has been working for some years. North of Samara there is a fairly wide area over which a line has to be built before communication between the Bosphorus and Bagdad is complete. Samara station, apparently, is on the opposite side of the river to the town of Samara.]

IN PALESTINE.

An official message from Egypt says:—The Turkish forces in Southern Palestine, which have been reinforced, hold a strongly entrenched position from Gaza towards Beersheba.

The organisation of the positions we gained fronting the Turkish main line is proceeding satisfactorily.

We blew up an ammunition dump at Gaza.

NATIONAL SERVICE.

The London Stock Exchange will close on Saturdays to enable members and clerks to engage in national service.

MR. BONAR LAW'S SON MISSING.

Mr. Bonar Law's second son, Lieutenant C. J. Law, of the Scottish Borderers, was wounded in Palestine, and is reported to be missing.

TO DESTROY ENEMY CROPS.

Lord Calthorpe proposes that the allied aeroplanes drop fireballs in the Rhine Valley and on the Hungarian Plain, and so destroy the crops. These are like tinder when they are ripe. Experiments with apparatus, he says, must be made immediately as rye is harvested in Germany at the beginning of June.

WAR NOTES.

REASONS FOR GERMAN ANXIETY.

Every fresh report from the British front on either side of the River Scarpe confirms the earlier statements regarding the determined nature of the enemy's resistance to the latest British attacks there. The violent counter-attacks which the enemy launched against the positions captured by the British have been repeated, according to Sir Douglas Haig, regardless of cost. Both official and unofficial messages strengthen the supposition that the enemy is particularly anxious regarding the safety of his line at the points attacked. The correspondents suggest reasons for this anxiety, the most popular theory being that, if the British had been allowed to advance to any great extent beyond the positions just gained, a withdrawal to a new defensive line would have been forced upon the enemy before his new positions were quite ready. Prisoners give this new line as the Drocourt-Queant line, which Mr. Philip Gibbs identifies as the real Hindenburg line. Drocourt lies about 5 miles south-east of Lens, while Queant is nearly 8 miles north-east of Bapaume, and is directly in front of Lagnicourt and the sector which was held by the Australians. A straight line drawn between the two villages would run roughly north and south with a slight lean towards the east at the southern end. The line between the two villages would represent a front of about 15 miles, and would completely cover the important junction town of Douai. It would also be an obstacle in the way of an enveloping move on the northern side of Cambrai. If Mr. Gibbs is correct in stating that the line is not yet finished, and that the work is now being feverishly carried out, we may take it that the construction of this additional section of the Hindenburg line is something new, which was hitherto unprovided for in the enemy's plan for the withdrawal from the Somme. It would seem as if the pivot on which the line swung has already been pushed back slightly, and that a serious alteration of the original plan has been necessary in the hope of avoiding serious trouble along the new front.

BETWEEN CAMBRAI AND ST. QUENTIN

If the enemy is in as serious a position as these correspondents suggest, it is easy to realise his desire to obtain supremacy of the air, and thus hide from his opponents the preparations which are going on behind his lines. This might account for the very heavy losses he has sustained in aerial fighting. There is, however, nothing to suggest whether he has scored any advantages to justify his losses. On the other hand, Sir Douglas Haig suggests that our airmen still have the upper hand, and continue to work well behind the enemy's lines. The fact that a large enemy machine was brought down inside the British lines, however, shows that offensive tactics are not confined entirely to the British machines. If the reports of our airmen indicated that fresh arrangements were being made behind the pivot of the enemy's line this would naturally induce Sir Douglas Haig to test the strength of the line farther south, and it is possible that the latest drive in the direction of the St. Quentin Canal was made with this object. A considerable amount of ground appears to have been gained by this attack, and, in addition to the capture of two villages, the line has been advanced as far eastward as the canal, which forms an important connecting link between Cambrai and St. Quentin. The point at which the canal has been reached is about half way between these two big towns, and the move is suggestive of an attempt to drive a wedge between them. The fact that no new defensive line of any great strength appears to have been encountered here is interesting.

WAR OFFICE AND ENEMY REPORTS.

We have repeatedly drawn attention in these notes to the various distortions of facts which appear in the German communiques. While it is quite legitimate for the German authorities to do their utmost to mislead and deceive their opponents, it is necessary that the masses of people in the different allied countries should be warned regarding the deceptive nature of certain information which is served up specially for their consumption. No one will be so foolish as to believe for a moment that these official fabrications are intended to mislead allied commanders or officials who are well posted in all the latest developments on the various fronts. They are not issued for this purpose at all. The aims of separate communiques may be different, and it is therefore difficult to arrive at a conclusion which will account for their frequent contradictions and glaring misrepresentations. One official message may be intended to influence opinion in neutral countries; another may be for consumption amongst civilians in belligerent countries; and still another may be intended mainly for the gratification or deception of the home populations in the Central Empires. The enemy message which the British War Office has seen fit to reply to this morning suggests that those who framed it had several axes to grind. In the first place, it endeavours to spread a belief that the British attack was much more extensive than it actually was, and that it proved a costly failure. The reference to the "deeds of heroism by regiments from almost every German district between the sea and the Alps" is evidently intended to appease the discontent amongst the industrial workers in Germany, as is also the concluding paragraph. The statement that all men and women at home are working unceasingly to support the soldier in his life and death struggle does not fit in very well with the many reports of strikes in Germany. This evident attempt to appeal to the patriotism of disgruntled war workers and of discontented civilians does not concern us greatly, and our main care should be to avoid being misled by the passages which are directly meant for us. The reply of the British War Office will enable us to do so, and it is to be hoped this is not the last message of the kind to be issued by the War Office.

GAINS ON THE BAGDAD RAILWAY.

The report received from General Maude this morning regarding the operations of the British forces in Mesopotamia is exceedingly satisfactory. It shows that the Turks are still suffering from their earlier defeats, and that, up to the present, they have been unable to make a stand for any length of time. Their couple of weak attempts to assume the offensive have had results which were far from encouraging, and now they are gradually being pushed back towards the north-west, along the Tigris, until the greater portion of the Bagdad railway, below the big break in the line between Nisibin and Samara, is in British hands. Samara is about 65 miles north-west of Bagdad, and is situated on the left or eastern bank of the Tigris. It will be noticed that only the railway station and not the town itself has been captured. The station is on the opposite side of the river to the town, and the success referred to in General Maude's message this morning was achieved by the forces operating on the right or western bank of the river. These forces have been advancing along the most southerly section of the Bagdad railway, which had been completed at least as far as Samara station. The railway has probably been carried another 30 miles or more further north, but the capture of so much rolling stock by the British suggests that the Samara station was an important depot on this section of the line. We have been told that the British communications between Bagdad and the Persian Gulf have been vastly improved, and, if this is so, they are not likely to feel the strain of their lengthening lines before they reach the railhead above Samara. The railway along which they are now advancing should be of great assistance to them in future, but if the advance is continued beyond the railhead they will again be mainly dependent upon the Tigris for the transport of supplies and munitions. The next item of news which we might expect to receive from this quarter is the capture of the town of Samara. The British on the right bank must be within sight of it, while those forces on the left bank, which inflicted such a pronounced defeat upon the Turkish detachment along the Shatt-el-Adhaim on April 18, should have advanced some distance along the road towards the town since then.

LATE WAR NEWS.

BRITISH PROGRESS.

Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his midday report of Wednesday says:—

We captured the hamlet of Bilhem, north-eastward of Trescault, during the night.

Fighting occurred in the early morning along our front between the Cojeul and Scarpe rivers. We further progressed and secured the ground gained.

We have made prisoner 3029, including 56 officers, since the 23rd inst.

RECRUITING.

The military authorities state that a limited number of officers of the Citizen Forces, who have not had an opportunity of attending a school of instruction for the training of applicants for commissions in the Australian Imperial Force will be selected to attend the Officers' Training School, at Duntroon, commencing May 10 next.

Owing to the High Mass being celebrated at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Cathedral, Roman Catholic soldiers in camps were granted leave to be present.

TO-DAY'S MEETINGS.

Lidcombe, 8 p.m., film "Why Britain Went to War."

Neutral Bay, Southern Cross Picture Theatre, 8 p.m., Lieut. Doull (lantern lecture), Lieut. Harris, M.C., Miss Ruby Board.

Mount Victoria, hall, 8 p.m., Mr. W. Cross, D.C.M., Miss Evans, Capt. Sailer.

IMPROVED RECRUITING.

BRISBANE, Wednesday.

Mr. Mackinnon, Director-General of Recruiting, arrived in Brisbane by the Sydney mail train on Tuesday night. He was met at the station by Captain Dash and others, and escorted by the Caledonia Pipe Band to the General Post Office, where a recruiting meeting was being held. Mr. Mackinnon delivered a short speech, in which he stated that for the present week so far the number of recruits had been the best since the present campaign commenced.

SPORTSMEN'S UNIT.

How often has the cry been heard across the playing-fields? "Now, boys, all together." How often has it been heard across the battle-fields of Flanders—and answered? Probably thousands of times. To-day, in the period of the greatest crisis the British Empire has ever known, the call comes from the muddy trenches, "Now, boys, all together;" and now is it to be answered? It is the cry of a "sport" to the "sports" over here in comfort and safety; the cry of a man who realised his obligations, his country's need, whose patriotism was greater than his love of self; whose sacrifice, if necessary, will mean his all, his life. And what are you "sports" who are left behind going to do? Are you content to listen and merely stand by, or are you going to give him a helping hand, that mate of yours over there who is fighting your battle, protecting your women, doing your "bit" for you? This is the appeal of the "Sportsmen's Reinforcement Unit," the body of soldier patriots who are endeavouring to raise men to reinforce the parent battalion now in France. On Friday, May 4, they are going to make a bigger appeal by means of a gigantic recruiting rally at the Stadium, Rushcutter Bay, and are arranging an attractive programme for the entertainment of the huge crowd that is expected to attend. Boxing items by Dave Smith, Jimmy Clabby, Fritz Holland, Colin Bell, Jim Tracey, Vince Blackburn, Albert Lloyd, and others, as well as jiu-jitsu by Shima, club-swinging by Tom Burrows, vaudeville by a dozen high-class artists, and other items too numerous to mention, will fill the programme; and short speeches on the great issue of the day will be given by the Lord Mayor and other prominent speakers. Admission will be free, and "sports" of all kinds are invited to go along and hear what the speakers have to say.

"ARMY EXHAUSTED."

"Alas! our little Australian army, which we are so proud of, is becoming weakened and exhausted," said Major Lynch, speaking in the Repertory Theatre last night. "Probably very soon it will only be a remnant, not because any of the soldiers are throwing in the sponge. I am loth to believe that there are men in Australia of British blood and Australian birth who would hesitate when their comrades call for assistance."

The theatre was packed when the play, "What Would a Gentleman Do?" was produced by the Sydney Vagabonds' Club. The proceeds will be devoted towards the purchase of a billiard table for the Anzac Buffet in the Domain.

ANZAC DAY CELEBRATIONS

INSPIRING SCENES IN AUSTRALIA

NATION HONOURS HER HEROES

There were great crowds in Sydney yesterday—the second anniversary of the famous Anzac landing. Memorable scenes marked the occasion. Freely and with full hearts the people did honour to those who wrote the noblest chapter in Australia's history. Solemnly they paid their homage to the noble dead.

It was a holiday—not so much a holiday in the modern meaning of the word as in the original sense; that is, a "holy day." The Government offices and most business places were open as usual, but there were times when work must have suffered, judging by the crowds that lined the streets during the big procession. Every window-sill was crowded with heads and shoulders while the soldiers marched past, and in this respect the offices and shops along Pitt-street differed in no wise from the Macquarie-street boarding-houses. It was one of the most remarkable days Sydney has seen—a day worthy of the occasion.

This was a bigger celebration than that of last year, not only because the arrangements were on a larger scale, but for other reasons. The war has been brought home to the people more fully within the last 12 months; more families are directly affected. There can surely be but few who have no loved-one at the front, or returned from the front; or perhaps in some grave on Gallipoli or on the shell-torn battlefields of France. There were many more returned men marching in yesterday's procession than in that of a year ago. There were many more made unable by wounds to step side by side with their comrades. More women wore mourning than on last Anzac Day, as more yet will wear it before another Anzac Day comes round.

THOUGHTS OF THE FALLEN.

Yet it would be unworthy of the heroes of Gallipoli if thoughts of sorrow were allowed to overshadow the brighter memories—the glorious memories of Anzac Day. Yesterday had its times of sad tributes to the fallen, but sadness certainly was not the prevailing note of the celebration. And that is as it should be. Just as the soldier in a charge may not allow himself to be checked in his endeavour by the sight of a fallen comrade, so the nation at war may not let the thoughts of its losses outweigh its rejoicings in glorious achievements, or the memory of its dead turn it aside from the goal in view. And how noble has been the example set by the bereaved mothers of Australia, whose pride in a hero son has helped them to smile through their tears and turn a brave countenance to the world. Throughout the Empire, all over Europe, in India, in small islands in the Pacific, women are taking their share; and who shall say their burden is not the heaviest?

Perfect autumn weather marked the anniversary. A kindly sun smiled from the almost cloudless blue. A gay display of bunting decorated streets and buildings. Hawkers sold little flags and coloured buttons to the people. There was a solemn moment at noon, when work generally was stopped for one minute, and thoughts turned to the memory of the fallen. At this hour memorial services commenced in St. Andrew's Cathedral, and in many churches. In Martin-place a band played, and thousands of people had gathered long before 1 o'clock. It was there that the recruiting rally was to be held, and in the meantime the Professional Musicians' Band played on a large platform for all who cared to listen. The broad, short thoroughfare was crowded from end to end, and from the Post Office to Challis House. Cheerful, inspiriting music diffused a general holiday spirit. But as the hour of 1 drew near the music changed, and with it changed the atmosphere in the place which, for the time being, was the pulse of Sydney. As the strains of "Abide With Me" and, later, "Lead Kindly Light" sounded solemnly and sweetly, the careless holiday mood fell from the crowd like a loosened mantle. And when with a roll of kettledrums the opening bars of the Dead March in Saul resounded, every man present bared his head, and all paid their tribute to those who died upon a foreign shore.

The most solemn and impressive hour of the day, however, was at the Showground, where a public memorial service in the afternoon was held after the procession. The crowd numbered some 25,000, apart from the soldiers and returned men. No one had anticipated such a concourse, and the tramway facilities, upset as they were by the street procession, were inadequate for the occasion. The scene as the massed bands played Handel's great dirge was one that will not readily be forgotten by those who were present.

THE ANZAC SPIRIT.

But the feature of the day that had the most popular appeal was the procession, and the most popular section of the procession was that which comprised the returned men, some distinguished by the coveted A on their shoulders, but all of them Anzacs if measured by the warmth of the people's greeting. What matter if their ranks were not quite even? What matter if as they marched four abreast one wore civilian clothes, and the uniforms or headgear of the others did not match exactly? What if they did lack the trim, well-trained physique of the reinforcements who marched with bayonets fixed, or the debonair carriage of the splendid Light Horsemen? They were the men who had fought and stood the test. The men who made Anzac the name it is. Heartily the people cheered them, and if a man marched haltingly, or with shoulders bowed, the cheers were redoubled as a tribute to his honourable wounds. It was these soldiers, cheerful despite a crippled limb, or tell-tale eyeshade, who helped to emphasise that the associations of Anzac are a matter for pride and rejoicing rather than sorrow or regret. Brigadier-General Lee, speaking at the Soldiers' Club later in the day, told how he had talked with a crippled soldier at the Showground. Though both legs had been amputated, the soldier talked with a smile. He was quite happy, he declared, and wanted nothing. His outlook for the future was bright and confident. "That," declared Brigadier-General Lee, "is the true Australian spirit."

That, indeed, is the spirit which made Anzac possible. And in years to come, when time has dulled the pain of bereavement, and when the sorrows that bite deep to-day are but scars on the memory, the pride of Australia in the word Anzac will remain with all its depth of feeling, a tradition for the young and a glorious recollection for the old. And later still, when men no longer sorrow for a generation that is gone, the anniversary will be a joyous celebration perpetuating the glory that the young Australian manhood of to-day has won.

THE PROCESSION.

Long before the advertised time of starting the procession crowds began to assemble in Queen's-square, Macquarie-street, and along the line of route. The troops were timed to move off at 2.15 from the Queen's Statue, at the top of King-street, but the crowds were so dense that they had to force their way into position. The windows of the new Registrar-General's-building, Macquarie's old pile, the Mint, "The Towers," and the Crown Law Office were packed with sight-seers; and, in fact, every window the whole length of Macquarie-street had its quota, and many of those who filled them waved miniature flags, among which the Stars and Stripes of the United States were greatly in evidence.

As the chimes rang out the quarter from the old red brick building, erected by Governor Macquarie a century ago, the boys of the Naval Brigade swung into place behind the posse of mounted police, and to vociferous cheers, waving of flags and clapping of hands, moved off at the head of the procession. The boys in blue had a great reception; the Sydney's fine work has not been forgotten, and the belated information recently supplied by the Minister for the Navy, describing the Melbourne's work, no doubt added to the warmth with which the senior arm of the service was received all along the route.

At the saluting base in front of the Mitchell Library, stood the Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, in full uniform. With him were General Finn and Captain the Hon. D. Clifford, A.D.C., Brigadier-General Lee, C.M.G., D.S.O., State Commandant, with Lieut. Collin, A.D.C., Colonel Stokes, principal medical officer, N.S.W., Major Page, D.A.Q.M.G., Major H. Evans, Captain Spain, Chief Enrolling Officer, the Inspector-General of Police, Mr. J. Mitchell, Commander Robins, R.N., captain of the Tingira, and Superintendent Sparkes of the Fire Brigade.

His Excellency was received by a guard of honour of the Garrison Military Police, in command of Lieutenant Anderson, who had with him Lieutenants Maney-Lake and Springhall. The 50 men were all nearly six feet high, and worked like clockwork. At the saluting base the Fire Brigade Band, under Bandmaster Devlin, was also stationed, and rendered a popular selection prior to the arrival of the parade.

Probably on no occasion have the great blocks of flats and other buildings in Macquarie-street been better patronised. Looking along the street it seemed as if every window and balcony was filled with women, while the roof of the Public Library opposite the saluting base, served as a grandstand for a huge crowd of spectators.

Following the Naval Forces came a number of returned soldiers, and it was noticed that more than one limped along on crutches, but, proud in the fact that he was allowed to wear his uniform again, he kept step with the best of them. These were the real Anzacs—the men who are permitted to wear the coveted A on their shoulder colours, and as they marched past the enormous crowd gave them the ovation they deserved. A squadron of Light Horse from Menangle Camp followed, and behind them came a detachment of the Australian Field Artillery, with a couple of guns. These grim reminders of the real thing woke a responsive chord in the crowd, and the guns and gun teams received a warm reception as they swung past.

That the procession might be an Anzac one in the full sense of the term, a number of New Zealand Mounted Rifles, now in camp at Menangle, and Victorian Mounted Rifles, came next in order. The men of the Dominion, who have helped to originate the word "Anzac," and the Victorians, who also had their share in the memorable landing, were cheered all along the line of route, and by their fine bearing and magnificent physique showed that there are still some of the best left and willing to go.

Siege Artillery, Engineers, a Mounted Wireless Section, Machine-gunners, Pioneers, Infantry, Australian Army Service Corps, and Australian Army Medical Corps, with ambulance waggons made up the A.I.F. contingent, and then came a number of Metropolitan Militia, including Light Horse, Field Artillery, Garrison Artillery, Engineers, Infantry, A.A.S. Corps, and A.A.M. Corps, the whole finishing up with a large number of Senior Cadets and members of the Fire Brigade, headed by their band.

PARADE STATE.

The number of troops on parade was:—

	Officers.	Other Ranks.	Total.	Horses.	Guns.
Naval Forces	8	200	208	—	—
Ret'ned soldiers	40	1221	1261	—	—
A.I.F.	62	2765	2827	21	—
Militia	6	619	625	46	—
Senior Cadets	25	725	750	—	2
	136	5630	5766	67	2

GOVERNOR'S APPRECIATION.

At the conclusion of the parade, his Excellency the Governor (Sir Gerald Strickland) informed the Military Commandant (Brigadier-General Lee, C.M.G.) that he felt not only pleased, but also impressed, by such a magnificent parade. It was, his Excellency added, thoroughly typical of the men who had fought and of the men who were leaving to fight. It was typical also of the existing generation of the Australian soldiers, who must be proud of those who had fought before them, and who had set an example of devoted loyalty to King and Empire.

COMMEMORATION SERVICE.

PRIMATE'S ADDRESS TO THE MEN.

Standing with bowed heads around the great ring enclosure of the Show Ground, twenty-five thousand men and women, yesterday, offered up prayer "in remembrance of Australia's sons who had counted not their life their own as they went forth to suffer and to die." It was one impressive moment in the solemn hour dedicated to a great combined commemoration service, and it was a scene such as few cities witness in their history—certainly few cities in a land so young. The great stands encircling the ring, built to contain cheering gay-clad throngs, pulsating with the excitement of stirring ring events, were yesterday filled with throngs just as great, but now silent with the emotion of a deep and common grief. It struck one, with heartrending force, to observe how the customary glamour of colour had departed from within the frames of the wide stands, to be replaced by serried and almost unbroken lines of black, relieved by the white of men's shirts and trembling handkerchiefs in the hands of quietly sobbing women. As the troops entered the gates the cheering which had been their accompaniment from the city gave place to a quieter appreciation, and the true atmosphere of the occasion fell quickly over the scene. Led by eighteen bands, the concourse sang the opening hymn, "O God, our Help in Ages Past," and, when the music had died away, the Moderator-General submitted prayers. First were tendered those for the "King and all in authority," then prayers for "those engaged in war—exposed to peril by land or sea, in the air and beneath the sea"—the words bringing home with vividness the immensity of the conflict). There followed the prayer of commemoration for those "who gave their lives on our behalf, and for the cause of liberty and justice, on the shores of Gallipoli," closing with a supplication, "for those who are anxious and bereaved." Then all—soldiers drawn up on parade—and the thousands looking on from without, joined in the Lord's Prayer. After the reading of the lesson by the Rev. J. E. Carruthers, D.D.—from the Book of Revelations, chapter 7, and commencing with verse 9—the hymn, "God the All Terrible," was sung, massed bands again accompanying the seldom-heard chorus of voices. In an address which succeeded,

The Primate of Australia (Archbishop Wright) said: "We are met here to-day in memory of your fallen comrades. It is the right thing to do in the tribute to those who deserve the tribute. They have, as you say in your own phrase, 'gone west;' gone to the land of the sunset, but the sunset precedes the sun rising, and it is in the hope of the sun rising that you pay your tribute to them to-day. You have visited in thought those many graveyards where they lie. A year ago—last Anzac Day—we thought principally of the great cemeteries of Anzac—those silent cemeteries round which the sound of war is hushed, and those other cemeteries on Lemnos and in Egypt. To-day you are remembering many more, others of which we think in our sorrow and yet in our pride. In all of them are comrades; battalions are gone. They went and returned not. Say not so: They come back transfigured. They come carrying to us and to our countrymen in Australia a truth that should never be lost. They tell us to do our duty and never count the cost. They tell us that when we do our duty, even when there seems no result, it is no wasted sacrifice. They did their duty. The results, many of them could not see. To some there appeared to be no results, but there are men amongst you to-day who are playing the man's part because they are following the heroic example of those who have gone. Gallipoli was no waste. When the day of peace comes, and the armies of the Allies march to victory, it will be along a road cut by those who fought and died at Gallipoli. Memories of the heroes who have died, and of the others who fought with them, cannot be effaced. They have given a manliness to our race which we can never lose with the memory ever present of those heroes. There is this other truth. They put ever in front a bigger vision than mere selfish comfort. They set that bigger vision like our brother allies of France, and the others. It recalls a picture of those splendid soldiers of France holding the trenches before Verdun, and also their words:—"They shall not pass. They must not pass." And they did not pass. What was it that held them there? Just that same vision that inspired our brothers. They saw, firstly, home and all its blessings; and secondly, the foe and all his brutality. A barrier had to be put. Those splendid soldiers constituted that barrier, and they said to the men in Australia to-day:—"Keep that barrier up. The foe is not yet beaten." More than this they say:—After the foe is beaten and peace comes in God's own time, we shall need a similar barrier still. Evil must be kept out of Australia, and who are the men to keep evil out? They are you who have fought and given your utmost to keep that evil out, and, as you play your part, you inspire the whole of the nation, and if the nation plays her part then "Australia, God's own land indeed, will be God's own land in verity. God comfort those who mourn; God bless our glorious land, and make us what He would have us be, the people of inheritance against the day when He comes in His Holiness."

The playing of the Dead March in Saul by the massed bands created a tragically pitiful scene. As the lingering, haunting music of the dirge persisted women broke down beneath the onrush of grief-stricken thoughts it aroused, and sobbed. And, from the ring, many a man, too, was seen to be affected by the sorrow of the broken-hearted women around and about him. There was a mighty comradeship in the grief, and it was this that gave the scene its almost unparalleled impressiveness. With the benediction, the sounding of the Last Post, and the National Anthem, the service closed, and, slowly, the great crowd broke up into units.

A distinctive feature of the impressive service was the playing of the massed bands, under the baton of Captain Bentley. They played with splendid precision, and with a general effect that was excellent. The bands that took part were the Lone Pine, the Naval Brigade, the Police, the Light Horse, the Lancers, the 1st Depot, Liverpool, Headquarters, Liverpool, the 18th, 20th, 22nd, 23rd, 21st, 24th, 25th, 38th, and 39th Infantry, the Cadets, and the North Sydney Grammar School Band.

On the platform within the ring enclosure were the Primate (Archbishop Wright), Professor Macintyre (Moderator-General), Dr. Carruthers (secretary of the General Methodist Conference), Mr. Steed (Baptist and Congregational Churches), Mr. Harward (Church of Christ), the Rabbi, Canon Cranswick, Chaplain-Captains Keith Miller, Robertson, Colwell, and the Rev. J. A. Barber, chaplain to the Moderator-General, Brigadier-General Lee.

In the official stand were to be noticed Captain Haskett-Smith (representing the Governor-General), Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, Sir Gerald Strickland, Brigadier-General Ramaciotti and Miss Ramaciotti, Brigadier-General Lee (State Commandant), General Finn, Commodore Henderson (Senior Naval Officer) and Miss Henderson, Sir William and Lady Cullen, Colonel Sandford, Colonel Stokes, P.M.O., Mr. J. J. Cohen (Speaker of the Legislative Assembly), Mr. R. D. Meagher (Lord Mayor), Sir Edmund Barton and Lady Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, Judge Backhouse, Mr. Sam. Hordern, and the Consuls of the allied nations. The distinguished guests were welcomed by a committee composed of Brigadier-General Ramaciotti, Dean Talbot, Mr. William Brooks, Mr. Willington, and the secretary of the State War Council (Mr. Govers).

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SPEECH.

"BECAUSE OF THE GLORY WON THERE."

BRISBANE, Wednesday.

The Governor-General, in the course of an Anzac Day speech, said:—

On Anzac Day our first thoughts go to our gallant dead at Gallipoli, where, two years ago, his Majesty's troops and those of France struck at the Dardanelles in order to reach Constantinople and to relieve a hard-pressed ally.

The peninsula was never the chief sphere of military operations; it was not the scene of any great victory; it was ultimately evacuated. Yet, nevertheless, the word Gallipoli will stand beside that of Blenheim and Quebec, of Inkerman and Ypres, on the colours of every regiment that took part in that splendid enterprise—because of the glory won there, not by this battalion nor by that, but by every man, whether he belonged to the Australian or New Zealand forces which landed at Anzac Cove or to the 29th Division, the Territorials, and Indian troops who made good at Cape Helles—or to the French division, who, though we British heard less of their exploits, are as much entitled to wear the laurels of Gallipoli as are their comrades of the British Empire.

But of all those who fought there, and by so doing held up large armies of Turks who would otherwise have fallen on the Russian armies, the Anzacs have a special reason to celebrate this anniversary—they were not the most numerous troops on Gallipoli—other units were larger; they did not suffer the heaviest casualties, but it was their entry into the great war, and a triumphant entry they made of it. It was there they won their spurs; it was there they displayed the old fighting qualities of the race—with a new gaiety, a particular dash of their own, which endeared them to their British comrades, who are so ever ready to recognise and applaud the merits and the achievements of their brothers in arms.

The Anzacs on Gallipoli brought to Australia and to New Zealand a new fame. It was there they justified their predominance in the southern seas.

Those original First and Second Divisions, with others added, have since Gallipoli gained fresh laurels in the decisive sphere of the Western front. There they are now part of the great line containing the vast armies raised by Britain and France, which are advancing to sweep the Germans off the fair lands of France and Belgium, which they have so wrecked and despoiled; and they will be there when the final overthrow of Germany is achieved, whereby alone freedom will be guaranteed to mankind. Nothing but lack of men can stay that advance and that overthrow. Nothing but failure to organise and deploy the whole strength can now rob us and our allies of victory.

We may be certain that Germany will not suffer defeat through any failure on her part to put the last man, last woman, and last mark into the conflict. Nor will France whose every available son is at the front, and is replaced in the field and in the workshop by her every available daughter. Our enemy and our ally, and our own mother country, with her 5,000,000 men under arms, her great navy and vast output of munitions, have set the standard. Each nation and every separate unit of the Empire will be judged by her approximation to or departure from that standard.

In war it is only acts and sacrifices that count, and they have to stand in contrast with the professions made and the ideals upheld in times of peace. A nation will go no higher or go down lower by the simple test of the response made by her sons to the tap of drum and by her daughters to the call for national service. She will be ranked in the estimation of mankind by the numbers who answer the roll-call, of those who risk life for liberty, and by the measure of the effort made to win the war.

This is not the time for nice calculations of appropriate quotas or of what it may be convenient to give or receive. Had the Allies entered upon such calculations and discussed what it would be convenient for each to give or to receive, then Germany would ere now have been in possession of the world.

That we are not now at her mercy is due to those who were first in the war.

We are glad to think the Anzacs were amongst them. Whether the peril of German domination is gone for good depends on whether these same men, reinforced by those who, like the United States of America, have come in later, continue to strike with every force they can command, drawn from every available quarter.

We are confident they will. To-day we renew the pledge to give our last man and last shilling, while baring our heads to the memory of those of our ain folk who forgot the claims of self and sacrificed life itself so that Australia might have freedom.

ANZAC MEMORIAL CONCERT.

One of the great moments at the Town Hall last night was due to the simultaneous rising of the densely-thronged assemblage to sing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." The vast auditorium, with its banners of all the Allies giving their glow of varied colour to the scene, seemed to close in, bringing hearts in nearer touch for the delivery of this devotional march-song. Mr. Ernest Truman's organ accompaniment in richly rhythmical and sonorous bursts of sound, kept the extemporised choral body wonderfully together, and the multitude of voices even followed the organist in a slight rallentando at the end. The audience included the State Chief Justice and Lady Cullen, the Japanese Consul-General and Mme. Shimizu, the Consul-General for Italy (Cavaliere Marano), the Lord Mayor (Ald. R. D. Meagher, M.L.C.), Mr. Robt. T. Ball, M.L.A. (Minister for Works), and Mr. R. Richards.

The Royal Sydney Philharmonic Society brought the needed note of solemnity to the occasion in the unaccompanied chorus, "Brother, Thou Art Gone Before," from "The Martyr of Antioch" (Sullivan). As the voices rose and fell under Mr. Joseph Bradley's baton in purest harmony, or poignant dissonance, the spirit of mourning and lamentation was overcome by a melodious charm that carried consolation in its train. Spohr's "Blest Are the Departed" opened the second part of the programme, which terminated with the "Hallelujah Chorus," Mr. Vern Barnett occupying his accustomed place as organist. In this way, as so often before, our premier choral society carried on its high tradition by giving musical distinction to a national function.

Madame Kate Rooney, after a long absence in England and New York, made her re-appearance to sing "Land of Hope and Glory," to organ and piano accompaniment. The contralto has returned with her melodious largeness of voice much augmented, and she rendered Elgar's stirring march-theme with a declamatory breadth that was highly effective. The encore, "The Bravest of the Brave," words and melody by Charles Sheldon, arranged by Joseph Massey, touched the audience owing to the pathos with which the singer delivered the pianissimo phrase, "Sleeping in a far off land." Miss Carrie Lanceley's high, clear soprano, mightily caught the house in Novello's "Laddie in Khaki," for which the Anzacs on the platform cheered her lustily, and she then responded with an excellent new song, "Salute the Allied Flags," composed for her by Joseph Gillott in London, where she first introduced it. Dr. Charles W. MacCarthy's spirited song, "The Toast is Anzac, Gentlemen!" was another number which caused a cheer after Mme. Kate Rooney's rendering to the composer's accompaniment. Mr. Lawrence Campbell recited "Anzac Day" (Dawson) opening with "It was impossible, and yet they did it!" and closing with the words, "Thrilled the whole Empire with exultant thunder, Made it cry as with one breath—Anzac!" The elocutionist was in great form, and the effort was recognised with enthusiasm on all sides. M. W. Y. Coad, Mr. Randal Woodhouse, Mr. Marsh Little, Mr. A. Goossens, all contributed to the success of the evening.

THE SPEECHES.

The Lord Mayor reminded the audience that they were all assembled to celebrate one of the greatest events in the great war now waged against the greatest monster who had ever imperilled civilisation. They were apt to forget that only 16 years ago the Australian States were welded into a nation, the new people and the new epoch marching at once through the opening gates of Destiny. Did anyone then suppose that the soldiers of Australia would so soon open those gates yet wider by their prowess and unparalleled valour in a field of war which at once placed them amongst the galaxy of the nations of the world? (Cheers.) That evening all present were privileged to see in the flesh some of those heroes of whom coming generations would hold only the memory, but that most dearly. (Cheers.)

Professor Macintyre said that since the war started, Australia, in close round figures, had sent away 300,000 men. (Cheers.) Up to last week 140,000 of these came from New South Wales. (Cheers.) Since the campaign of 1917, from January 1, the Commonwealth as a whole had enlisted 18,000 accepted recruits. That was not so very bad, especially as 7000 of these came from this State—(cheers.)—the average being 415 a week as against Victoria's 4400 and 276 a week. Still, we were only sending half the number required for reinforcements at the front, and he pleaded for more enlistments, in order that, in the words of Lord Kitchener, we might "Carry on"—carry on to the end. (Cheers.)

Senior Chaplain the Very Rev. Dean Talbot (president of the Returned Soldiers' Association, N.S.W.) drew a moving picture of the scene of the landing at Gallipoli that day two years ago.

Lieutenant J. Thomson, one of the Anzacs, made an impassioned speech, in which he foretold many a pilgrimage to Gallipoli to lay flowers upon the graves of the fallen.

IN THE COUNTRY.

ALSTONVILLE.—The Anzac celebrations were held in the Public School, which was decorated with flags and patriotic devices. The Union Jack was flown at half-mast in memory of the soldiers who died in Gallipoli. It was later hoisted and saluted by the school children while the National Anthem was sung. Mr. P. J. Daley, president of the Parents and Citizens' Association, presided. A musical programme of patriotic items was given. Mr. Abernethy read a list of the names of ex-pupils who had enlisted. The list totalled 58 names. Addresses were delivered by the chairman, Archdeacon Treas, the Rev. Kay Mason, and the Rev. J. Yates. Services were held at the various churches.

ARMIDALE.—Anzac Day was celebrated at Armidale by services in all the churches. A procession, comprising Cadets, Boy Scouts, and returned soldiers leading horses with empty saddles, marched to the Central Park, where addresses were delivered by Senator Oakes, the Mayor, and ministers of the different denominations. Four recruits were secured. Flags on all the business places were at half-mast all day.

COOMA.—A procession was held and patriotic addresses were delivered by leading citizens in memory of the Anzacs. At a meeting held subsequently it was decided to collect funds for a soldiers' memorial.

GLEN INNES.—Great interest was taken in the Anzac celebrations. Stirring addresses were delivered by Canon Kemmis, the Rev. A. P. Cameron, the Rev. Mr. Westbrook, and Ensign Pettit, of the Salvation Army. An honour roll, containing the names of 50 local and district soldiers who have been killed, was read and wreaths were placed on the soldiers' monument in the main street. Demonstrations were held at the district school, and an honour roll was read, containing the names of 154 ex-pupils.

INVERELL.—Anzac Day was celebrated by a combined service of the various Protestant denominations in the Town Hall. The Bishop of Armidale delivered a patriotic address. He said that for all time Australian calendars would carry the word "Anzac" opposite April 25. Doubts had sometimes been cast as to whether Australians were fighters, whether they were men fit to hold this fair land of Australia; but the men of Anzac gave an eternal answer to the world. Heaven had sent them the opportunity, and right nobly had they embraced it.

KEMPSEY.—At the district school the children were addressed by Mr. Knight, the head master, the Rev. D. Smith, the Rev. Chaplain Bellhouse, Mr. W. T. Dangar, and Mr. P. J. Arnold, chairman of the Parents and Citizens' Association. At the post-office corner 3000 people assembled round the honour board, containing 45 names of men of Kempsey who have been killed in the war. The Mayor (Alderman Lane) delivered an address.

NOT DISLOYAL.

HIBERNIAN SOCIETY PROTEST

Archbishop Cerretti, the Papal Delegate, opened the annual conference of the Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society yesterday morning at the Southern Cross Hall, Castlereagh-street.

The district president (Bro. Devlin), after a brief review of what he described as "a very prosperous year," said it was fitting that representatives of the Hibernian Society should meet on Anzac Day. He availed himself of the opportunity to nail to the counter a deliberate lie and a gross calumny. It was something more than a misrepresentation to say, as had been publicly said, that the Hibernians were wanting in loyalty and patriotism, while other sections of the community were responding to wartime call of duty. (Applause.) No fewer than 1941 members of their society had enlisted for active service abroad. Of this number 51 had made the supreme sacrifice, 67 had been wounded, and five were reported as missing. These figures, although incomplete, were the most effective answer that could be made to the slanderers of their nationality and their religion. (Enthusiastic applause.) Taking into account the fact that the majority of their members were married men, the percentage of volunteers who had offered their services and sacrificed their lives in the cause of justice and freedom was equal to that of any kindred society in the State or Commonwealth. (Renewed applause.) In addition to the false charges of disloyalty, political pamphlets were being circulated throughout the State which were most offensive to Catholics and Irishmen. (Hear, hear.) After the statement he had just made he hoped that no clergymen of any denomination would degrade themselves by association with those evil-minded mischief-makers who were circulating this class of libellous literature. (Applause.) The members of the Hibernian Society who had gone to the front did not ask the religion of the brave comrades with whom they had fought side by side. (Applause.) Then why, he asked, should religion be dragged into their election campaigns? (Hear, hear.) There should be no question as to the loyalty of Irish Catholics in Australia.

Archbishop Cerretti, after thanking the members of the Hibernian Society for having made him chaplain-general, said he was well acquainted with the Hibernian Society in the United States before coming to Australia. In this regard he was not surprised to hear that 250,000 American Hibernians had offered to fight if America entered into the war. Nor was he surprised to hear that in the matter of patriotic duty the Hibernians in New South Wales had done what the Hibernians in the United States promised to do. (Applause and laughter.) The district president had spoken of some members of the society who were returned to Parliament in the general election. In offering his congratulations to those gentlemen he (Archbishop Cerretti) thought he could best express himself by using a familiar political or parliamentary phrase. It was customary in this country to speak of platforms and planks of platforms. (Laughter.) Well, he felt that he was right in saying that the platform of these members was "For God and for country." (Applause.) He would add that he had never known of a Hibernian who had broken any plank of this platform. (Mingled applause and laughter.) "For God and for country" should be their motto as members of the Hibernian Society, as citizens of the State, and as defenders of the British Empire. (Applause.) They could have no better motto. If they loved and served God and were true to the land of their birth or their adopted country they could not go wrong. (Applause.) Patriotism was a sacred thing, and a civic duty. (Hear, hear.) The best answer to those who accused the Hibernians of disloyalty was the 1000 soldiers who had gone from their ranks to the war to fight for the Empire and for the freedom of Australia. (Enthusiastic applause.) After all that Catholics had done in this terrible war, fighting for freedom and justice, it was sad to find their loyalty not only questioned, but assailed in Australia by one section of the community. He would ask the members of the Hibernian Society to pay little attention to misrepresentation and calumny. Having as their motto "For God and for country" they should go ahead with increased enthusiasm and stronger than ever in their resolve to be loyal to their religion, loyal to their country, and loyal to the Empire of which the Australian Commonwealth is a priceless part. (Enthusiastic applause.)

Monsignor O'Haran and Monsignor Collins also spoke.

THE LIQUOR TRADE.

On Tuesday a deputation from the United Licensed Victuallers' Association of New South Wales waited on the Minister for Justice (Mr. Garland) with regard to the following matters:—(a) The presiding magistrate of the Rents Reduction Court to state the basis on which he proceeds to arrive at his conclusions; (b) the right of the owner of the licensed premises to appear and take part in the application, as between the licensee and the lessor; (c) the reduction of rent to be retrospective—in view of the diversity of opinion amongst presiding magistrates some official pronouncement should be made on the matter; (d) the right of presiding magistrates to take into consideration the question of profits and the fact whether the hotel is doing a residential business or not; (e) the question as to whether the presiding magistrate should take into consideration the improved value of the property, and the fact that the rental paid was only a fair return to the owner of the property.

Mr. Garland, in replying, said it was the desire of the Government that no injustice should be done to any trade or to any section of the community. He had no hesitation in saying that when the Act was before the Legislative Assembly every one thought that the section of the Act gave magistrates power where loss of trade was proved to have been caused to the tenant by the earlier closing of hotels to grant an abatement of rent to the tenant, dating back as far as the date when the 6 o'clock closing provision came into operation. It did not seem right that a magistrate should have power to grant a licensee who had never paid any rent from the time 6 o'clock closing came into effect abatement as from July, 1916, because the rent was not paid. It seemed an extraordinarily hard position that a man who had not paid his rent could obtain that benefit, whilst the man who had could not. The best course to adopt would be to have a case brought before the Supreme Court, possibly by way of mandamus.

WAR CASUALTIES.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

PRIVATE E. W. LARSON.

Private Eric W. Larson, who died of wounds in France, was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Larson, of Heatherdean, Wardell-road, Dulwich Hill, and was a single man of 28 years. He was born in Sydney. He was attached to the Machine Gun Section. Private Larson was a plumber by trade, having passed his course at the Sydney Technical College, and gained first-class certificates. Private Larson has a younger brother, Private S. O. Larson, and a brother-in-law, Gunner C. A. S. Carrett, on active service.

CORPORAL E. GIBSON.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Gibson, of 31 Rosalind-street, North Sydney, have received official notification that their second eldest son, Corporal E. Gibson, died of wounds at a casualty clearing station in France on April 13. This is the second of four sons on active service to give his life for his country.

WOUNDED.

LIEUT. G. C. BOWMAN.

Mr. P. S. Bowman, manager of the Commercial Bank at Condobolin, has received news that his son, 2nd Lieut. G. C. Bowman, was wounded in France. Lieut. Bowman recently received his commission on the field.

MISSING.

NEWCASTLE, Wednesday.

Mr. A. Langwill, general manager of the Newcastle Gas Company, has received advice by cable from the War Office that his son, Lieut. Trevor Langwill, of the Royal Flying Corps, was reported missing on April 16.

CONGREGATIONAL UNION.

The half-yearly conference of the Congregational Union was held at the Church School Hall, Pitt-street, yesterday. The Rev. W. L. Patison presided. The morning session was mainly devoted to the reading of papers and discussions.

"The Responsibility of the Minister" was the title of a paper read by the Rev. W. Allen.

Chaplain P. Watson read a paper on "The Responsibility of the Church Member," in which he humorously depicted certain church-goers' opinions as to what they considered should be the qualifications of an ideal minister.

"I believe," he said, "that a minister ought to take a vital interest in the young people of his church, and share their life as far as possible in all directions, but I do, nevertheless, think that the minister is often unfairly penalised by parents who have neglected to foster a religious atmosphere and inculcate lofty moral and spiritual ideals in the home. Children are trained to do only the things they like, rather than the things they ought to do. And then the minister is blamed because he cannot do in a few months what those who have had the care and training of the young people have neglected to do throughout the whole of the children's lifetime."

The conference made a short adjournment to allow members to attend the Anzac memorial service in the church.

The afternoon and evening sessions of the conference were confined to progress reports.

The following resolution, on the motion of Rev. A. Deans, B.A., convener of the public morals committee, was adopted:—"That this assembly heartily approves of the anti-shouting campaign in the interests of national efficiency and economy, especially relating to our brave soldiers. That we ask the Federal Government to issue a minute under the War Precautions Act forbidding shouting in the matter of alcoholic beverages during the war, and for a year after peace is proclaimed."

MR. TRETHOWAN REPLIES TO MR. HAGELTHORN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Hagelthorn, under the heading "Work of Wheat Pool Defended by Minister," states that the remarks of the delegates to the conference indicate a lack of appreciation of the work done by the gentlemen conducting the wheat pool and also the Federal State, and Imperial Governments, and the banks, for the farmers of the Commonwealth. The conference did not belittle what has been done by the pool, but pointed out many things that might also have been done to make the proposition more successful.

We, as farmers, do most certainly object to the claim that all that has been done has been done solely for the benefit of the producer. What would have been the position of the small business man, the merchant, and the financial institutions, also the Commonwealth trade balances in London, if the wheat crop could not have been marketed? We claim that the whole community is equally interested with ourselves, and think that the time has arrived when the contention should be dropped that it was solely in the interest of the producer that the pool has been carried on, and the attempts made to make the public believe that they are the only class who have benefited. The conference did not belittle the work done nor did it lack in appreciation of the efforts of all concerned, but because certain propositions are put forward that would further the benefit of the scheme and because we ask that those who are most vitally interested in its success should be represented and have a say in the handling and sale of the product, Mr. Hagelthorn sees fit to try and place us in a false position with the public and to misrepresent the efforts we are making.

In the four large wheat-growing States there undoubtedly exists amongst the producers a feeling of suspicion regarding the handling of their wheat and Mr. Hagelthorn should be the first to recognise that to make the scheme a thorough success this should be dispelled, and every effort made to create that feeling of confidence amongst the farmers that would induce them to whole-heartedly support what is co-operation in its highest sense if properly managed.

Mr. Hagelthorn also knows that our contention that a 4s guarantee is insufficient has nothing to do with the wheat pool, and to introduce this into the argument shows that he is only trying to mislead the public as to our just grounds for complaint.

I am, etc., A. K. TRETHOWAN,
President of the Farmers' Federal Organisation.

FEDERAL ELECTIONS

MESSAGE FROM MR. HUGHES

PERTH, Wednesday.

An address was delivered by Senator Pearce at the National Federation rally last night. Senator Pearce emphasised the fact that the election had been caused by the war, and that members of the coalition Government had cast behind party considerations for national interests. He traced the course of conspiracy against Mr. Hughes. Before the Prime Minister returned from England an organisation was secretly at work against him.

The President of the National Federation read the following telegram from Mr. Hughes:

"Fellow Citizens,—The issue in this campaign stands out bold and clear, like a mountain peak. The civilised world is engaged in the greatest war of all the ages, fighting for liberty and democracy against military despotism. The question that every elector is to answer by his or her vote at the ballot-box is this—shall Australia play her part in this great life and death struggle, as becomes a nation of free citizens fighting for all they hold dear? Are we going to prove ourselves worthy of our freedom, of the protection of the Empire, and of the sacrifice freely made by millions of our kinsmen, and by our own brave soldiers, the men of Gallipoli and Pozieres. Remember that the interests of the Empire and Australia are one. The National party stands for Empire, for pressing on to a decisive victory. We put the war first, because the war means life or death to Australia, to liberty, to all that makes life worth living. With us this great struggle for liberty transcends all else. Vote for the men who stand for Australia and Empire, who in the face of supreme national peril have joined hands, and remember only that they are free Australians and that Australia and liberty are in deadly danger. Vote for the Nationalist candidates for the Senate, as well as for the Nationalist candidate for the House of Representatives in your division, for a majority in the Senate is essential if Australia is to be true to herself, to do her duty to the Empire and to the boys at the front."

NATIONALIST APPEAL.

The following appeal, which is signed by the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) and the Minister for the Navy (Mr. Cook) has been circulated throughout the Commonwealth:—

"Knowing that you take a deep patriotic interest in the welfare of your country, we appeal to you to throw the whole weight of your influence behind the three National candidates for the Senate—Senator Millen, Mr. H. E. Pratten, and Mr. Josiah Thomas. We are sure you will realise that the Senate is the all-important factor in the present elections, as unless a Senate victory can be secured all the efforts of the Win-the-War Government will be rendered nugatory, and deadlock will occur.

"If you wish to defeat the men who regard the war as only a secondary consideration, if, indeed, they are not actively hostile to the Empire, you must help to return a Senate majority for the National party.

"In the present grave crisis there is a call to you to do all you possible can to bring about that result by working wholeheartedly for the return of Messrs. Millen, Pratten, and Thomas. As you are aware, the Federal Parliament has been forced to the country by a hostile Senate. The men who have pledged themselves to win the war have been thwarted in their efforts by those who put party before the needs of country. We are convinced that as a loyal Australian we may count upon your valuable assistance to end such a state of affairs.

"This is no mere political appeal. It is above party, and essentially a National call. The three National candidates for the Senate are out to win the war, and to deal adequately with the grave problems arising from the war. Believing that we can depend upon your patriotism at this serious juncture in our history, we confidently ask you to support the National candidates.

"Use your influence with your friends and others to ensure the return of the National candidates. Every vote is wanted. There is active work awaiting you in your own neighbourhood. Every National sympathiser must be induced to vote. This can only be assured by an exhaustive, personal canvass. Will you see as many of those in your vicinity as you can and secure their pledges to record their vote? If there is a contest for the House of Representatives in your district, get in touch with the local committee and help. Remember that every vote obtained for Messrs. Millen, Pratten, and Thomas means an advance towards victory.

"In the immortal words of President Wilson, 'The world must be made safe for democracy.' That is the aim of the Senate three—Messrs. Millen, Pratten, and Thomas. Vote for them, and induce others to do likewise."

RECRUITING OFFICE CONSPIRACY.

LONDON, April 24.

The Criminal Court of Appeal has quashed the conviction of Dr. Caley, who was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment in February last.

[A cable at the beginning of March stated:—In regard to the conspiracy discovered at the White City Recruiting Office to grant certificates of unfitness for active service to men of military age, Dr. Caley and John Mitchell have been sentenced to 18 months imprisonment; Brinkman to 12 months; and Dr. Dow to nine months. Sheppard was acquitted.]

BRITISH SMELTING COMPANY

LONDON, April 24.

A smelting company, with a capital of £500,000, has been registered to take over the smelting concerns in which Mr. R. Tilden Smith is interested.

COUNTRY NEWS.

COONAMBLE.—The smallpox scare has subsided. No fresh cases have been reported.

LISMORE.—Before Judge Hamilton, in the Quarter Sessions on Tuesday, George Joseph Petrie and Joseph James Petrie pleaded not guilty to a charge of cattle-stealing, and were acquitted. Daniel Donoghue and Frank Underhill pleaded not guilty to a charge of conspiracy to pervert the course of justice, and were acquitted.

NARRABRI.—The Minister for Health (Mr. Fitzgerald) addressed a meeting of the electors last night. To-day he visited the hospital and attended the Anzac demonstrations at the local school. Mr. R. S. Cameron has been appointed secretary of the local hospital.

LATE MR. EDWARD HUFTON.

The death on Friday last of Mr. Edward Hufton, of Leichhardt removes from Sydney University one of its oldest officers, he having been assistant to the chemistry professor for 36 years. The funeral at Rookwood on Saturday was largely attended by relations and friends, the University being well represented. Mr. Hufton, who was well known and highly respected by a wide circle of friends, died in his 62nd year, leaving a widow, one son, and three daughters, one of whom is connected with the Public Instruction Department.

MINING.

FALL IN COPPER.

BARRIERS FIRMER.

A fair average volume of business passed in all classes of mining scrip on the Stock Exchange yesterday. The Melbourne and Adelaide Exchanges displayed increased activity.

The London metal market showed an all-round drop of £3 in copper, but the price is still about £60 a ton above the pre-war rate. The heavy demand for tin continued, and as an increase in supplies in England did not seem imminent buyers were compelled to pay a further 5/ per ton. Most of the tin propositions on the local market responded, and Laruts, Ronpibon Tin, Bentong, Tongkah Harbour, and Trong were placed in higher estimation. Ratruts were inclined to ease, but closed practically firm. Weaker bids were again "called" for Carpathias, but the latest return shows that there was a much larger despatch of ore to the battery, and a consignment of five tons of concentrates to Sydney, which should have a steadying effect on the market. Vegetable Creek hardened to 4/8, which was followed by the declaration of a sixpenny dividend.

A strong market ruled for Barriers. The continued higher price in London of Proprietary scrip, inducing London orders on the Australian market, has necessarily steadied business in the concern. Higher prices were given for Junction Norths at up to 10/4, while Junction (con.) put on /4, to 6/3. Other Broken Hill stocks were supported at firm figures.

A depressing movement, evidently emanating from Melbourne, caused sharp declines in most Edna May ventures, but towards the close a rally occurred, which, however, failed to reinstate the stocks in their former positions. Central Deeps and Consols closed lower for cash sales, while at one month's despatched Edna Mays sagged to 32/.

At three months, Morgans were lower, on account of the industrial crisis at the mine, which may develop into a general strike. The persistent demands for a war bonus by employees at the Mount Lyell property had the effect of weakening buyers' offers. On the other hand, the favourable reports of the mining inspectors and others on the development work at the 350ft level at the Hampden mine tended to lift the shares. According to the March report of the Government Inspector, a large body of ore is being opened up.

LONDON SHARE MARKET.

LONDON, April 24.

On the London Stock Exchange to-day British B.H. old shares were quoted b 27/6, s 28/6; B.H. Proprietary, b 47/, s 48/.

NOTES.

The third dividend of 1/ per share has been declared by the Koch's Pioneer Gold and Tin Mines, and is payable on May 9. The books close on May 1.

The Vegetable Creek T. M. Company has declared its tenth dividend of 6d per share, payable at the registered office, Martin-place, on May 31. The transfer books will be closed from May 16 to 31 inclusive.

Mr. J. S. Palmer, director of the Junction North Company, who, with Mr. Reynolds, another director, has been in Broken Hill for several days, returned to Sydney last night. Mr. Palmer, before leaving, spoke very pleasingly of the work on the mine. The selective plant started before the war, was, he said, running very effectively, making high records, and producing a high-class result out of the several stuffs treated.

MINING AT BROKEN HILL.

BROKEN HILL, Wednesday.

Mr. E. J. Horwood, manager of the Broken Hill Proprietary mine, said, in the course of a speech on Monday night at Broken Hill, that even after the war is over, Broken Hill would be able to bid with any other place in the world for the metals that the world would require. There was a good future for Broken Hill, whatever the conditions of the metal market would be. They had reason to think that mining would be active for many years to come. Many of the mines had ore disclosed that would keep their plants going at their present rate of working for at least ten years to come. There were large bodies of ore going underfoot. In the cases of a very considerable section of the mining industry in Broken Hill, there was no end in sight, though, of course, all mines were not equally favourably suited."

SCRATCHINGS.

V.A.T.C. MEETING.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Neerim Steeplechase: Alhagonyah.

Khartoum Hurdle Race: Blind Murphy and Solemnity.

CITY TATTERSALL'S AUTUMN MEETING.

After two postponements, due to heavy rain, City Tattersall's Club will hold its Autumn Meeting to-day at Randwick. Although some scratchings have been recorded during the week, the best of the entrants have stood their ground, and everything points to a successful meeting.

The Hurdle Race, starting at 1.45, will open the programme, and the most likely ones to fill the places are Quirind, Lord Cecil, and Fitzmack.

Some good sprinters are engaged in the Denman Stakes, including Dame Acre, La Steppe, Spurn, Ickle Lass, and Show Girl; and they may finish Dame Acre, La Steppe, and Ickle Lass.

In the Youthful Stakes, Gurranang, Throssell, Conacre, and Wilbred should supply the places, finishing Gurranang, Conacre, and Throssell.

The field for City Tattersall's Cup will bring out some of the best horses in training, and the numbers may represent Rushford, Fantarie, and The Christian Brother.

Sport will conclude with the Club Welter, in which the positions may be filled by Black Nut, Taquisara, and Bandoliero.

KENSINGTON RACING CLUB.

TRESSADY MAID WINS KENSINGTON HANDICAP.

Kensington Racing Club's pony and galloway meeting was run off yesterday in fine, bright weather, and the paddock and Leger reserves were crowded. Two events were decided in divisions, but the programme was disposed of in good time. The totalisator was in operation, and £2020 was invested. Tressady Maid, a 3 to 1 chance, won the Kensington Handicap. When returning to scale after this race Lord Haven collided with the fence near the gate, and his rider, A. Brown, was somewhat shaken. Details.

GOVERNOR'S FAREWELL DINNER.

His Excellency Sir Gerald Strickland was given a farewell dinner at the rooms of the Commercial Travellers' Association last night by the executive of the association. Mr. A. M. Graham, president, occupied the chair, and a warm note of cordiality tinged with expressions of sincere regret at the loss of an old friend marked the proceedings.

Mr. Graham said his Excellency, as an old friend of the association, had endeared himself to the hearts of the commercial men of this State by the keen interest he had manifested in the welfare of its primary industries. Referring to the post-war trade questions, the chairman said their esteemed guest had on many occasions sounded a note of warning, in urging a closer and more sympathetic relationship between the producer and the consumer. This warning of what might befall us if we did not regard the serious trade problems ahead of us with infinite concern, was the more accentuated because it came from one who had made himself thoroughly conversant with every phase of the agricultural life of this country.

Mr. Douglass also spoke.

Sir Gerald, in responding, assured them of his deep sense of appreciation of the warm expressions of approval which they had extended to him. He could not depart from the State, he said, knowing its wonderful primary potentialities as he did, without associating with it the great standard of organisation which the Commercial Travellers' Association had brought to bear upon the various industries concerned. (Applause.) Sir Gerald strongly urged them, as commercial men, who had their finger on the pulse of the trade wants of Australia, to encourage the broad principles of preferentialism with Britain and her Allies after the war. (Applause.)

HAWKESBURY COLLEGE.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of diploma day at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College was celebrated yesterday by a large gathering. The visitors were the guests of the principal at luncheon, at an inspection of the college work, and later at the annual presentation of diplomas, certificates, and prizes. The college buildings and grounds were in perfect order. The Minister of Agriculture, Mr. W. C. Grahame, accompanied by several State members of Parliament and leaders in the agricultural life of the country, were among the visitors.

The principal (Mr. Potts) presented his annual address, in which he stated that the college still laboured under the disadvantages prevalent during the past two years created by war conditions, but this year not to such an intense degree as formerly. The attendance roll had increased in the section allotted to the full course of training. These classes were now equal in number to those of 1911. At least 78 per cent. of the ex-students were putting their college training into practice, and were either settled on the land or occupying responsible positions associated with rural pursuits. In this direction the college stood higher than any similar institution in the world. (Applause.)

The Minister for Agriculture said he was glad to find the college in such a prosperous condition despite the many obstacles which interfered with the natural progress of such work, chiefly the war, and the fact that at the present time the Government found it necessary to retrench in every way possible. It spoke volumes for the tact and ability displayed by Mr. Potts.

At the instance of Mr. Grahame, the audience enthusiastically accorded Mr. Potts a hearty vote of thanks, and a similar compliment was paid to the Minister. The special prizes were as follows:—

Over 80 students of the college were presented with their year's certificate.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COL. FERRIS.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ferris, a native of Parramatta, died at his residence, Ross-street, Parramatta, on Tuesday night, at the age of 60 years. Deceased represented the Parramatta electorate in the State Parliament for nearly three years—July 27, 1898, to June 11, 1901. He defeated Mr. D. P. O'Reilly, and was in turn defeated by the late Mr. T. R. Moxham. As a young man Lieutenant-Colonel Ferris joined the Parramatta Company of Volunteer Rifles, and took command as captain in succession to the late Captain Byrnes. In 1896 he retired with the rank of major, and later on was given the rank of lieutenant-colonel, V.D. For a number of years he represented Forrest Ward in the municipal council, and twice filled the Mayoral chair.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

Yesterday was Anzac Day, and was regarded as a semi-holiday by many of the leading merchants. As a result very little inter-house business was reported, although a fair proportion of orders was to hand from the country.

In the oil market the feature of the day was the receipt of a cablegram from Messrs. Blundell and Spence, announcing that the price of their brand of linseed oil for prompt shipment had been advanced /3 a gallon, thus making the f.o.b. value 4/7½. This is regarded as a fairly "stiff figure," because it means a landed cost of about 7/2, compared with the present spot price of 6/6. The locally-produced oil sold well at unaltered levels. Queensland houses made inquiries for white-lead, and orders were accepted for the leading makes on a basis of £72 a ton. For red-lead £66 was secured. Turpentine was steady.

Manufacturers' metals moved out in average quantities. The local manufacturers of barbed wire announced an advance of £2 a ton all round, "owing to the steadily increasing price of raw material." Ordinary 12 gauge is now quoted at £36, and 14 gauge at £37/10/, while 12½ gauge special brings £37/17/6, and 14 gauge £39/7/6. Wire netting and fencing wire were obtainable at unchanged values.

Private cablegrams stated that at this week's public tea sale in Colombo 2,500,000lb were offered. On the whole, the quality showed a marked falling-off when compared with the consignments recently landed in Sydney, and prices were, on the whole, easier. The withdrawals were extremely few, as buying was general. At the Calcutta sale there was a strong demand for all grades, but the exchange difficulty effectively stopped any big purchases. On the local market yesterday New Zealand operated freely in Javas. It is understood that the teas were required to fill a shortage in the cheaper grades of Ceylons.

Jute fabrics were again extremely quiet, and prices were unchanged. Branbags were offered at 8/, woolpacks at 4/, and cornsacks at 8/7 net to rails.

CABLEGRAMS TO MANILA AND THE PHILIPPINES.

The Postal authorities have received advice from the Pacific Cable Board in regard to Manila and the Phillipine Islands that cablegrams are now admitted in A.B.C. 5th Edition, Scott's 10th Edition, Western Union, Lieber's, Bentley's (except separate mining and oil supplement), and Excelsior. The code used must in all cases be stated. Numerical equivalents in these codes are not admitted. Registered or abbreviated addresses or signatures are not admitted. Cablegrams must be fully addressed and signed with at least a proper surname. Cablegrams in plain language must be in either English, Spanish, or French.

LONDON, April 24.

The Government has raised the war risk on steamers to £5/5/ per cent.

BUTTER.

Colonial butter is steadier. Australian choicest is quoted at 192/, and New Zealand at 206/ per cwt.

Danish is plentiful, and is quoted at irregular prices. In Manchester and Liverpool it is selling at from 200/ to 202/.

WHEAT.

NEW YORK, April 24.

Chicago futures are quoted thus:—May, opened 2.41 dollars, closed 2.31½ dollars; July, opened 2.07½ dollars, closed 1.98 dollars.

The American visible supply of wheat is estimated at 35,549,000 bushels, compared with 39,699,000 bushels a week ago and with 159,293,000 bushels a year ago.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

ADELAIDE, Wednesday.

There was a steady local trade in wheat and flour and mill offal, and a good demand at £4/5/ net cash; bran, £6. For pollard and oats there was a little better demand. Sales: Feed Algerians, 1/11 f.o.b. Port Adelaide; barley, dull and more or less nominal, English malting 3/6 to 3/9, Cape 2/6 to 2/9. There was a slightly firmer tone in chaff owing to the dry weather, 67/6 ex trucks Mile End, bags included; cornsacks in demand for reconditioning stacks affected by the mice plague, trade lots 9/ ex trucks Port Adelaide; branbags firmer tone, 7/9 to 8/, buyers ex incoming steamer offer 7/9; onions steady, £5/10/ to £6; potatoes £4/10/ to £5. The market was slightly firmer in tone.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Bran and pollard are difficult to procure. English barley is dull, 3/9 to 4/7; Cape, good inquiry, 2/8 to 2/9. Oats, firmer tone; milling Algerians, 2/2 to 2/3; feed, 1/10 to 2/. Maize steady, 3/2. Following are the wholesale prices ruling at the Western Markets:—Apples, eating 4/ to 8/, cooking 4/ to 7/6, Tasmanian 6/ to 8/6; grapes 6/ to 10/; lemons, Victorian 6/ to 10/, New South Wales 5/ to 6/, imported 10/ to 12/; oranges, New South Wales 6/ to 7/, Queensland 10/ to 12/; quinces 2/ to 2/6.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

In the live stock market to-day, 2605 fat cattle were yarded. They comprised 2155 bullocks and 450 cows, including 470 from New South Wales. The yarding of bullocks was an exceptionally good one, a very large proportion being of prime quality, and almost the whole of the balance good to useful sorts. The attendance of buyers was quite up to the average, and the market was an irregular one. Early sales showed a decided decline in values, but later on bidding became brisker, and prices fluctuated materially, being generally above those of the opening sales, whilst towards the close the market firmed to close up to last week's rates. Quotations:—Best pens of bullocks, £18/10/ to £22/2/6. Cows were in good request at unaltered rates; extra to £23/7/6; odd bullocks to £25/10/; good pens of bullocks, £17/5/ to £18/7/6; good light and handy weights, £15 to £17/2/6; second and inferior to £14/15/; best pens of cows, £13/7/6 to £16; odd cows to £17/17/6; good pens cows, £11/15/ to £13; second pens of cows, £10/2/6 to £11/5/; inferior cows from £5/12/6. Fat calves: 880 penned, including a fair proportion of prime sorts. The demand was fairly strong throughout, but lower values ruled for all classes.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

EGGS SELLING WELL.

In the dairy produce section of the Sussex-street markets yesterday there was a strong demand for all classes of eggs. New-laids were again very scarce, and choice lots commanded 2/6. River eggs, which were more plentiful than was the case on the previous day, cleared at 1/5 to 1/7. New-laid duck eggs were worth 2/2 to 2/3.

Bacon, hams, and cheese were in strong demand at late prices.

Quotations were:—

Eggs.—Hen, suburban, new laid, 2/4, choice graded 2/6; Northern Rivers, 1/5 to 1/6; South Coast and railways, 1/6; farmers' lots, 1/9 to 1/10, few extra choice 2/; duck eggs, new-laid, 1/10 to 2/2, case 1/4 per dozen.

Butter.—2/ per cwt to be added for boxes and storage. Choicest, 149/4 per cwt; packed in prints ½d per lb extra may be charged.

Hams.—Single cloth, 1/3¼; seeds, 1/4 per lb.

Cheese.—Local: Matured, /10 to /10½; prime, /9½; large, /9 per lb.

Honey.—60lb tins of choice western, /5½; candied, /4 to /4½; Northern River, /4 to /4½, occasionally /5 per lb.

Lard.—Packets, /10½ to 1/; bulk, /10 to /11½ per lb.

Beeswax.—1/6, dark from 1/3 lb (almost nominal).

POULTRY.

River and Railways.—Old hens, 3/3 to 3/9, choice 4/, roosters, small 3/6 to 4/, choice to 5/6; muscovy ducks, 4/6 to 5/, drakes 5/6 to 6/6; English ducks and drakes, 4/ to 4/6; guineafowls, 5/ to 5/6 (nominal); chickens, 1/ to 1/6; turkeys, hens 7/6 to 10/, gobblers 10/ to 17/6; pigeons, 1/3 to 1/9 a pair.

Suburban consignments.—Roosters: Choice young to 8/, good 5/ to 7/; medium light and old from 3/. Hens: Choice heavy to 6/, good 4/ to 5/; medium light and inferior from 3/. Ducks: Eng., choice young to 6/, good 4/ to 5/; medium light and old from 3/9; Muscovy, choice young to 5/6, good 4/6 to 5/; medium light from 4/, old to 5/6. Drakes: Muscovy, choice young to 8/, good 6/6 to 7/6; medium light and old from 6/. Turkeys: None to hand. Geese: 8/ to 10/. Pigeons: Young and old, to 2/6. G. fowls, to 6/6 a pair.

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

A steady business was done in forage and grain. There was a strong demand for potatoes at the previous day's rates. The market for maize was bare; available prime yellow being very firm at 3/3, while white was unobtainable. Millet was easier. Onions eased to £5/5/.

Quotations were:—

Chaff.—Wheaten, prime £4/15/ to £5, good £3/10/ to £4/10/, medium £3 to £3/7/6; oaten, prime £5, good £3/10/ to £3/15/ per ton, inferior chaff almost unsalable.

Oaten Hay.—Victorian: £5/10/ to £5/15/; local, £5/10/ to £6 a ton.

Oats.—Tasmanian: A grade Giants, choice 3/ to 3/2; Algerian, Tasmanian, and Victorian, feed 2/5 to 2/7, milling, 2/8 to 2/9 per bushel.

Potatoes.—Tasmanian: Redskins and Plunketts, £7, Brownells £6/10/, Bismarcks £6, Pinkeyes £5/10/ a ton; Victorian Carmens, £5/10/.

Broom Millet.—Prime long hurl, £30 to £35; inferior from £20 a ton.

Peas.—Grey, 5/6 to 6/6, blue 13/6 to 14/6 a bushel.

Maize.—Prime dry yellow, 3/3 a bushel; white, none offering.

Onions.—Victorian: Brown Spanish, £5 to £5/5/ a ton.

Firewood.—Boxwood, choice 24/6, good 22/, stringybark, 20/ to 24/; ironbark, 16/ to 18/6; mixed wood, 16/ to 17/6; bakers' wood, best 19/, good 17/, inferior 11/ to 12/ a ton.

RAILWAY MARKET.

Consignments of fodder forward at Alexandria yesterday were small, chiefly comprised of grain chaff, with a fair representation of lucerne hay and chaff, and derrick straw. The usual attendance of buyers was present, and stocks passed off quickly at steady rates. In the vegetable section, eight trucks were forward, but only two, which consisted of pumpkins, were sold at auction.

The yardings comprised 55 trucks of forage, 11 of grain, and 8 of vegetables; while the manifest included 94 trucks of forage, 6 of grain, and 8 of vegetables.

The following sales were effected:—

Wheaten Chaff.—Kemlen, Ganmain (1359), 3/1; Hughes, Dripstone (4803), 3/; ex Burrumbuttock (17183), 3/11, (17348) 3/10; Longhurst, Stockinbingal (2306), 4/3; Pinn, Crookwell (8455), 3/7; Bean, Pamandi (18843), 4/9; ex Gunningbland (1916), 4/9; Hynes, Goonumbla (11901), 4/1; Jones, Canowindra (12084), part 5/; ex Homebush (9363), 3/6, (17905) 3/9 per cwt.

Oaten Chaff.—From Birks, Old Junee (18159), 5/; Tresilian and Dun, Stockinbingal (8261), 4/9; balance wheaten, 3/11; ex Burrumburttock (9085), 3/11, (9610) 3/11; McKinnon, Ganmain (10813), 4/8; Bullock, Blayney (1305), 4/, (18310) 4/; Stoney, Old Junee (4056), 4/6; ex Lyndhurst (12020), 3/7 per cwt.

Oats.—Ex Gerogery (9869), 190 bags Algerian 2/3 per bushel.

Lucerne Chaff.—From Hollingshead, Duri (16426), 4/9, balance 7 bags dust 9/3 per cwt.

Lucerne Hay.—Ex Scone (14151), 4/3 per cwt.

Pumpkins.—Ex Bathurst (15140), 2/3; ex Singleton (14293), 3/7 per cwt.

FRUIT MARKET.

There was nothing to record in connection with trade in fruit. A fairly brisk business was transacted at firm rates.

Quotations were:—

Lemons.—Choice 4/ to 4/6, medium 2/ to 3/ a bushel case, small and inferior practically unsalable.

Oranges.—Main crop, 3/ to 4/; second crop, choice 7/ to 9/, medium 3/ to 4/, small 1/6 to 2/6 per bushel-case.

Apples.—Local: Dessert, extra choice 9/ to 10/, choice 7/ to 8/, medium 5/ to 6/6, small 2/6. Cooking: Choice 6/ to 6/6, medium 4/ to 4/6, small 2/6. Victorian: 8/ to 8/6. Tasmanian: 8/ to 9/. Western Australian: Jonathan and Cleos., 7/ to 8/6 per bushel-case.

Mandarins.—Choice 7/ to 8/, medium 3/ to 4/, small 1/6 to 2/ a bushel-case.

Peaches.—Victorian: Choice 7/ to 8/, medium and small 5/ to 6/ per bushel-case.

Passionfruit.—Choice 7/6 to 8/, medium 2/ to 4/, small 2/ a half-bushel case.

Pineapples.—Queens, 9/ to 12/; Ripleys and Commons (nominal), 4/ to 6/ a case.

Grapes.—Black muscatels, choice 8/ to 10/, medium 4/6 to 5/, small 3/6 to 4/; Sherry, white, 6/ to 7/, black, 6/ to 7/6 a half-bushel case.

Persimmons.—2/ to 5/6 a half-bushel case.

CALF SALES.

The yarding forward at Homebush Bay yesterday consisted of 457 calves, chiefly comprised of bobbies, with a smaller number of good vealers and yearlings than usual. Competition was active for the latter descriptions, and values showed material alterations on late rates. Owing to the increased supply of bobbies forward the demand was dull, and values in that section were generally a little easier.

Quotations were:—

Best yearlings to £8, good from £6 to £7, medium £5 to £6, light from £3/15/.

Best vealers to £4/10/, good £3/15/ to £4/5/, medium £3 to £3/10/, light from 50/.

Best bobbies to 47/, good 35/ to 40/, medium 27/ to 33/, light from 17/.

STOCK TRUCKINGS.

Trucks ordered for forthcoming stock sales were:—April 30, 212 sheep and 140 cattle waggons. May 3, 251 sheep and 121 cattle waggons.

WORLD'S POTATOES.

REMARKABLE SHORTAGE IN PRODUCTION.

The average potato crop of the world is estimated to be some 5,200,000,000 bushels. Of this amount the undermentioned countries produce on an average of 2,925,000,000 bushels. Complete statistics for the world's crop of 1916 are not available, but from those received it is estimated that the countries named below produced in 1916 only 1,753,500,000 bushels, or 34 per cent. of the world's average crop:—

	1916. Bushels.	1915. Bushels.
United Kingdom	204,148,000	281,502,000
Canada	61,128,000	62,604,000
Germany	771,610,000	1,984,140,000
France	335,507,000	345,251,000
Netherlands	73,685,000	87,756,000
Switzerland	22,046,000	39,683,000
United States	285,427,000	359,721,000
Total	1,753,561,000	3,160,757,000

STATION PRODUCE SALES.

The Sydney Wool Selling Brokers' Association report:—

Furskins.—Kangaroo, wallaroo, and wallaby ruled firm, while goatskins were slightly dearer. Foxskins realised full late rates. Rabbitskins: 55 tons were forward. The better qualities were frequently 1d per lb dearer, but inferior and greasy sorts were very dull of sale, and quite /1 to /2 per lb lower. Quotations:—Grey kangaroo, small /9 to /25 each, medium /30 to /70, large /75 to /168; red kangaroo, small /8 to /20, medium /24 to /57, large /60 to /100; wallaroo, small /9 to /20, medium /22 to /45, large /48 to /60; wallaby, scrub, small /4 to /16, large /20 to /52; wallaby, swamp, small /5 to /18, large /20 to /48; rock wallaby, to /14; foxskins, best sorts 140/ to 155/ per dozen, exceptional to 160/, good 100/ to 130/, medium 70/ to 90/, inferior 30/ to 60/, damaged 5/ to 20/; hares, to 2/6 per dozen.

Rabbitskins: Few picked lines, /29 to /31½ per lb; good incoming bucks, /24 to /27; medium incoming bucks, /19 to /22; smalls and racks, /16 to /18½; best does, /14 to /16; average does, /11 to /13; kittens, /12 to /14½; culls, /7 to /11; mixed sorts, /15 to /19; gutted bucks, best /17 to /19½, good /11 to /15, inferior /6 to /9; gutted does, /6 to /7.

LOAD LINE REGULATIONS.

The Superintendent of Navigation, Sydney, desires to correct an impression prevalent in some circles that the British authorities have permitted vessels loading imports of New South Wales to load below the usual recognised mark. The following cablegram, which has been received from the Agent-General in London, states the Board of Trade has only granted this concession with regard to loading below the Plimsoll mark to vessels trading from the River Plate, and it does not otherwise apply to foreign shipping.

HOTEL,
PLEASURE,
WITH THE GREATEST OF PLEASURE WE PLACE before you particulars of an Hotel which is coveted by numerous people. Supposed buyers have called ready to inspect, but we have refrained from giving them particulars. "Envious are those who have not the goods to sell." We very fortunately through our old established connection and extensive business transactions, are in a position to offer something that the less progressive people are not familiar with. To-day our two cars were continuously active; our staff did not have time even to view the procession, and in our dealings we have pleased thousands; made fortunes for hundreds; independent people of thousands; and wealthy people in galore. Can we make a fortune for you? Now, we guarantee the figures below, but please bear in mind no details will be given unless we are satisfied that you are genuine; not sent from envious opposition.
